Baessler Called the Ringleader as Judge Sentenced M. Conner

Anton Baessler, Who Took His Life Rather Than Pay Law's Penalty, Called Instigator in Death of Quick—Michael Conner Receives Sentence.

County Judge Frederick G. Traver in sentencing Michael Conner to a term of from 20 years to life at Clinton State Prison made it clear that in his mind Anton Baessler, who was convicted with Conner for the murder of Uriah Quick last January, had been the master mind and instigator of the crime. Judge Traver in imposing sentence told Conner that had it been the lot of the court to impose sentence on Baessler a much more severe sentence would have been given. However rather than face the punishment Baessler took his own life last Monday morning by hanging in his cell while awaiting sentence.

When county court was convened in the supervisors' rooms due to supreme court being in session in the large court room the room was filled to capacity. District Attorney Cleon B. Murray moved judgment in the case of Conner. Conner was brought in court by Jailer Abram Melyneaux and appeared to be little concerned in his fate. Roger H. Loughran who defended Conner against a first degree murder charge, was in court and moved to set aside the verdict of second degree murder and for a new trial on the minutes of the court and on the grounds that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence and also certain irregularities in the indictment and also on several points of Judge Traver's charge and requests to charge which were denied.

Motions Are Denied.

Judge Traver denied the motions and after Conner's statement had been taken he was sentenced. Conner gave his age as 63.

At the opening of court Judge Traver stated that he had been informed that since the date had been set for the imposition of sentence on Conner and Baessler, one of the defendants, Anton Baessler, had died as a result of self inflicted injuries. Mr. Murray stated that this was correct and requested that it be placed on the minutes of the court that Baessler died on May 22, 1933. Since Baessler had removed himself from the jurisdiction of the court Judge Traver stated that there remained but one defendant to sentence. At that point he asked counsel if there were any motions and Mr. Loughran presented his argument.

LeRoy Lounsbery and Lloyd R. LeFever, who defended Baessler at the trial and won for him a second degree conviction on the first degree indictment, were also in court. Mr. Lounsberry said that at the time of the verdict of the jury he had asked that time be set for motions in the case and the court had fixed Thursday as that time. At that time Mr. Lounsberry said he had informed Mr. Baessler that he would be in court to make motions at the time set. Since then Mr. Baessler had died, he said, but he felt that in order to do full duty to his client he should be in court and if the court deemed it advisable he was willing and ready to move to set aside the verdict, but if the court thought this was unnecessary he said he would not insist. There was probably nothing he could do now but he desired to do his full duty to his client even though the client was not present.

Judge Traver informed Mr. Lounsberry that there was apparently nothing to be gained by making motions at this time and Mr. Lounsberry said he would not insist.

Conner Will Appeal

In pronouncing sentence on Michael Conner Judge Traver said, "Had it fallen to my lot to impose sentence on Anton Baessler I should have imposed a more severe sentence in his case than I intend to impose in your case, Conner. I believe Baeseler's was the master mind in this matter, he was the ringleader and whatever you did, whatever was your part I believe you did at his instigation and pursuant to his plan." Judge Traver then pronounced sentence on Conner. Later Mr. Loughran said there would be an appeal from the conviction.

Theresa Brown, charged with conducting a disorderly house and maintaining a public nuisance, was arraigned and pleaded guilty to the charge. Judge Traver imposed a fine of $150 or 60 days in jail. She paid the $150 fine. The violation is alleged to have taken place in the town of Ulster at Eddyville. Defendant was indicted last fall but failed to appear for arraignment and she was picked up a short time ago on a bench warrant.

Judge Traver requested that the supervisors' room, which has been fitted out by the sheriff as an ampro-vised court room so that two courts might be held in the building at one time, be held in that condition in order that county court might use the room for the June term which convenes on June 5. Supreme court will be continued on June 5 in the regular court room. The April term of county court was adjourned to chambers.

CONVICTED MAN TAKEN TO DANNEMORA TODAY.

Deputy Clayton Vredenburg, of the sheriff's office, and Deputy Everett Roosa this morning took Michael Conner to Dannemora to begin serving the sentence of 20 years to life imposed by County Judge Frederick G. Traver Thursday.

American Legion And Auxiliary Ask Support For Sale of Poppies

Tomorrow America will pay honor to its World War dead. Millions of Americans in every part of the country will wear bright red poppies to show that they still remember and are grateful for the service of those men who gave their lives in defense of the country 15 years ago. Here in Kingston the women of the Kingston unit of the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute memorial poppies in all parts of the city throughout the day.

Preparations for Poppy Day were completed today by the local auxiliary women. A large corps of volunteer workers are ready to take the streets early tomorrow morning with the city's share of the memorial poppies. Women from other organizations have offered their help to the auxiliary and are enrolled on the auxiliary's poppy squads. School girls will distribute poppies by the side of grayhaired Gold Star Mothers whose sons died among the poppies in France. The women of the city will be united in a patriotic effort as they were in the World War days.

The poppies which the auxiliary will distribute tomorrow have been made by disabled World War veterans working under auxiliary supervision at Bath Soldiers, Home. The employment that the auxiliary has been able to give these men has helped them provide food and fuel for their families during the period when they could not possibly have found other employment. How soon the poppy making can be started again depends on the public response to tomorrow's sale.

The auxiliary will distribute its poppies on a voluntary contribution basis. Poppies will be given in return for contributions of any size the individual is able to make. None of the American Legion Auxiliary workers, who will be easily identified by badges, will receive any compensation for her services. All contributions will be used for the relief and rehabilitation of disabled veterans and their families.

The following committees will sell poppies for the American Legion and Auxiliary:

Lady Nicotine And Forest Workers Are "Off Duty" Friends

Fire Prevention Regulations Forbid Use of Smoking Tobacco, Cigarettes and Pipe While Hunting for Elusive Gypsy Moth Egg or Planting Trees.

Lady Nicotine and the forest workers of the Civilian Conservation Corps are to be strictly "off duty" friends. The stern hunt for the elusive gypsy moth egg and the industrious setting out of seedlings must go on without benefit of solacing pipe, cigarette, or perfecto.

Fire prevention regulations, issued at Second Corps Area headquarters of the Army on Governors Island, prohibit smoking while at work in the forests, permitting only the old soldier's quid or "chaw" to C. C. C. rookies who want tobacco during duty hours.

Camp sites, however, are to be cleared of underbrush and a fifty-foot boundary strip burned over to eliminate the fire hazard from carelessly dropped cigarette butts. Smoking will be permitted within the camp area. No buildings, tents, or mess fires are to be located within 200 feet of boundary strips.

Forest fire-fighting plans divide each company of C. C. C. workers into three reliefs, one of which is to be ready at all times to respond to fires outside the camp boundaries. A regular fire plan for within the camp, following Army garrison fire regulations, has also been adopted for the C. C. C.

When a fire relief is called out for a forest fire, the next relief will be dismissed from its routine work to rest and to hold themselves in readiness for call. Each relief will work from 6 to 8 hours and then relieved by the next relief. Coffee, food, and water will be supplied the firefighters.

Dr. Krom Home Saturday.

Dr. John B. Krom, who has been doing work at Post Graduate Hospital, New York city, for several days, will return to his office, 203 Fair street, Saturday to resume his hour from 7 to 8 o'clock.

A Food Sale.

Circle No. 1 of the Elmendorf Street Presbyterian Church will hold a food sale at the Rose & Gorman store Saturday afternoon starting at 1 o'clock.

Work Relief to Devote Funds to Building Streets

With Money on Hand and Anticipated Revenue Emergency Work Relief Will Have $60,000 to Spend—North Street, South Wall, West O'Reilly and Roosevelt Among Streets Listed.

The emergency work relief committee meeting Thursday evening in the old armory definitely decided to abandon the proposed Foxhall avenue sewer construction owing to lack of funds to complete the work, and decided to use what funds there were in building streets. Among the streets mentioned are North street, South Wall street, West O'Reilly street and topdressing Roosevelt avenue. With funds on hand and anticipated revenue from refunds from the state the work relief committee will have about $60,000 to work with.

The work relief will also erect detour signs while the Boulevard project is under way and a sign will be installed at DeWitt Lake directing traffic through Greenkill Park to the city, and another sign at Rosendale directing traffic to Kingston over the Lucas turnpike. There will also be placed signs in the city directing traffic over the Boulevard to Rosendale to use the Lucas avenue road instead of the Boulevard while construction work is in progress.

The committee decided to take over the work of placing North street in shape if the street has been properly deeded to the city.

The committee also took up several routine matters and then adjourned.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS TO MEET ON MONDAY.

A meeting of the board of supervisors has been called for Monday evening, May 29, at 8 o'clock, daylight saving time. This meeting is called for general business but the chief business to be transacted will be highway matters and bridge work. At that time some action will be taken on the reconstruction of the Mt. Marion covered bridge which was destroyed by fire some time ago.

3 Business Groups Killed C. of C. Here, Culloton Explains

Birth of Three Business Associations Sounded Death Knell of Chamber of Commerce, Said He Head Addressing Central Business Association Thursday Evening.

The organization in Kingston of the Uptown, Central and Downtown Business Men's Associations sounded the death knell of the Chamber of Commerce here, City Judge Bernard A. Culloton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, told the Central Business Men's Association at its spring meeting and dinner Thursday evening at the Elchler Hotel on Railroad avenue, and he expressed the hope that a new organization would be formed that would work for the interest of the entire city. The work of the legislature was the topic of the address given by Assemblyman J. Edward Conway, while Alderman-at-Large Conrad J. Heiselman brought the greetings of the Downtown Business Men's Association and told what steps had been taken by the common council to take over the old armory on Broadway.

The spring meeting and dinner of the association had been arranged by a committee headed by Harry B. Walker, and it proved one of the best meetings in the history of the organization. During the evening a fine musical program was rendered by Billy Brodhead's orchestra and the diners were led in singing by Alderman Paul Zucca.

John Matthews, president of the Central Business Association, presided and introduced the speakers of the evening. Assemblyman Conway has been a member of the association since its organization, and has served as chairman of one of its most important committees. Mr. Conway spoke at some length on the work of the legislature and told of the progress of a bill that is introduced and what happens to it before it is finally passed or rejected. He said that during the last session of the legislature over 4,000 bills had been introduced. His talk proved highly interesting and gave his hearers a better insight as to how the state's business is conducted at Albany.

Mr. Heiselman brought the greetings of the Downtown Business Men's Association and then told of what steps had been taken by the common council to take over the old armory property. He said that an aldermanic committee headed by Alderman McGrane of the Ninth ward had been appointed and this committee would meet with the board of supervisors who would hold a special meeting next Monday evening. At that time the committee would make a formal application to the supervisors asking that the old armory be deeded to the city for the sum of $1. Mr. Heiselman said that his idea, if the request was granted, would be to appoint a committee to look over the building and see what alterations were necessary to turn the armory into a building suitable for convention purposes. He said that it was his idea that if the board of public works could be induced to purchase the materials needed it might be possible to induce the emergency work relief committee to furnish the men to make the necessary alterations to the building.

President Matthews in introducing the last speaker of the evening, Judge Culloton, said that the judge was the president of the father of the three business associations. Judge Culloton spoke briefly stating that the birth of the triplets had sounded the death knell of the Chamber of Commerce. He said that many asked what about the Chamber of Commerce: what is it doing? "Well, in answer to those questions I would say that every day I go to the office and open the mail." He said that the Chamber had no active members and no money in its treasury. Recently in the mail addressed to the Chamber of Commerce he found a letter from the State Civil Service Association stating it would like to hold its annual convention in Kingston in June.

Judge Culloton said he promptly sent off a letter inviting the association to meet in Kingston. Then he sent out letters to twenty-two of the business men of the city asking them to meet with him to take up plans for entertaining the convention.

This convention committee was functioning and he was in hopes that it would form the nucleus of an organization that would work for the interests of the entire city. He said that the city needed an organization of business and professional men no matter under what name it was known, the Chamber of Commerce, a board of trade or any other name. He hoped that the three business associations would form some plan to get together and unite in one organization that would work, not for the interest alone of uptown or downtown or the central section, but for the entire city.

The officers of the Central Business Association are: President, John Matthews; vice president, Ferd Gildersleeve; treasurer, G. W. Teichler; secretary, Monroe T. Southard. The directors are C. S. Treadwell, Wesley Gregory, Harry B. Walker, Chester Miller and John Gregory.

A brief history of the organization was given by Secretary Southard who told of its formation and what it had accomplished.

Memorial Address by Rev. Mr. Mauterstock Heard by Kiwanians

New Paltz Pastor Delivered Annual Tribute to War Dead—Club Honor John Holliday of Port Ewen, Civil War Veteran.

Declaring that the real patriot is "he who lives for those things that other men in the past fought and died for," the Rev. Robert L. Mauterstock of New Paltz, addressed members of the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Thursday noon, in a Memorial Day talk. It has been the custom to invite Civil War veterans as guests of the club to this luncheon, and this year only one, John Holliday of Port Ewen, 86 years old, was able to attend. Tribute was paid this lone figure of the G. A. R. when club members arose and sang, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," in his honor.

Patriotic and old time songs featured the musical program under the direction of Paul Zucca, accompanied at the piano by Danny Bittner. A quartet composed of Joseph Deegan, Dr. Raymond S. Crispell, Jacob H. Tremper, Jr., and Joseph Stout, sang the spirited "Yankee Doodle," after which these four were joined by Clarence Schoonmaker and Dr. Julius Gifford and the sextet rendered "Home on the Range."

Superintendent of Schools Van Ingen invited members of the club to attend the choral and orchestra concert at the high school this evening. One guest was introduced, John F. Wietz of Long Island.

The Rev. Mr. Mauterstock in opening his remarks paid tribute to Mr. Holliday, and said that there were two divisions in a Memorial Day celebration, the glorifying of war and the dead heroes, and the remembering what it costs to live the standards for which these soldiers died.

"While we are paying tribute to the war dead, we must remember that they fought in our best interests—our task is to live for these same ideals and carry on with equal patriotism," exclaimed the speaker. "In our sorrow for the dead, we ought not to merely stand with bowed heads, but continue and do our part," he said.

"These soldiers fought and many of them gave their lives in a dream of a safer and a better world. Warriors of all nations, creeds and races stood shoulder to shoulder to protect ideals—now our part is to stand shoulder to shoulder in the same manner to make the world safe in peace.

"The day of wars will eventually pass, but the day of chivalry and service of one man to his brother men will never pass. It is our duty to work for the greatest good for the greatest number," he continued.

The Rev. Mr. Mauterstock concluded his address by saying "true patriotism rests on the individual. It is up to him to honor the dead by living for the things for which the patriots in the past have died."

Pioneer Veterans' Annual Reunion

The tenth annual reunion of the Pioneer Veterans of F 51 was held on Thursday evening at Golden Rule Inn. The members usually hold their annual get-together on May 26 of each year which is the anniversary of their induction into the national army this year being the fifteenth year since their induction in the service. Because of the anniversary date falling on Friday the date of the annual reunion was changed to May 25 this year.

Following a delicious chicken dinner with all the trimmings, a meal fit for a king, the members held a short meeting and elected Frank A. Jagger president for the ensuing year. Other officers elected are: First vice-president, Vernon Huston; second vice-president, Gordon Van Kleeck; secretary, Eugene Cornwell; treasurer, Peter Keresman; historian, George Planthaber, Jr.; sergeant-at-arms, John Waterman.

In recognition of his services during his term of office, the retiring president, Oliver Bush, was presented wtih a fountain pen.

Following the custom of the past few years, there were no speeches made but the members enjoyed a social hour discussing their experiences of war days. It was a late hour when the members left for home having spent a most enjoyable evening and another reunion had passed into history.

The next big event of the 51st Pioneers will be the annual reunion of the regimental association to be held in September at Hempstead the early part of September.

Three Given Awards Totalling $15,200 In Supreme Court Case

William Lake Awarded $10,000; F. J. Carroll, $5,000, and T. J. Aiken, $200 in Actions Against Margaret and Edward Scott.

William Lake was awarded $10,000 for injuries which he received in a motor car accident near Coxsackie. Frank J. Carroll was awarded $5,000 and Thomas J. Aiken $200 in their actions against Margaret and Edward Scott in Supreme court.

The three men were injured while invited guests in the Scott car enroute from Albany to Kingston. All three were boatmen and had accepted an invitation to ride along in the Scott car while their boat was tied up near Albany. On the way down the three plaintiffs claim the Scott car attempted to pass a line of cars and as a result he lost control and the car overturned. Lake was severely injured and claimed permanent injuries to his shoulder. Carroll was also injured and claims permanent injuries. Aiken suffered less severe injuries.

William Lake was represented by Flanagan and Kaercher and Brinnier & Elsworth appeared for the other two plaintiffs. David B. Sugarman appeared for defendants.

No. 46, Bertha Persell and another against Bertha V. Addis, was announced as settled by Lloyd R. LeFever, attorney for defendant.

Judge Staley denied a motion to change the place of trial of an action brought by Sarah C. McCommons, as administratrix etc., of James Albert McCommons against Osman Rosenberg and another. The action was brought in this county to recover damages for the death of Mr. McCommons who was killed on the Bear Mountain road early this year in a crash between his car and a truck. The motion was made to change the place of trial to Rockland county. The case is now on the May calendar and Judge Staley this morning denied the application to change the place of trial and permitted it to remain on the day calendar.

Regarding the cases which come under the strike off rule Judge Staley announced that when court resumed on June 5 these cases would have to either be disposed of when reached or they would go off the calendar. He warned attorneys that beginning June 5 when the cases coming under this rule were reached they could either be tried, inquests taken or they would be stricken off.

An inquest was taken in an action in negligence brought by Frank Kieffer and another against Daniel Waterman and another. Frank W. Brooks appeared for plaintiff. The action grows out of a motor car accident at Washington avenue and Main street.

GOVERNMENT AIRPORT MAY LOCATE NEAR HERE

That there may be an airport near Kingston under the supervision of the government is promised by the fact that federal men for some time have been surveying and considering for use the land of three farms along the state highway in Port Ewen about two miles from the Rondout Creek Bridge.

Black, today said that the federal men are considering the use of about 300 acres on that farm and a portion of the Svirsky and Sottile farms nearby. He added that the government surveyors spoke of making the airport one of the most modern in this part of the country, with up-to-date hangars and all other latest improvements for the use of planes carrying mail.

Translations Hit Spain's Authors

Madrid (AP).—Spanish novelists complain that translations of foreign works have cut the demand for native fiction so they have to give up writing or turn to memoirs or adventure stuff. But publishers aver that if the authors would write as interestingly as their foreign contemporaries, the books would sell.

Tydol Triple X Parade Held Here

The Tidewater Oil Company heralded the coming of its new Triple X gasoline to Kingston with a parade Thursday afternoon. In the line were Tydol distributing trucks, cars of dealers, Jacob C. Hummel representing a white charger in an armored car and two roadsters in which rode the Triple X girls—Mrs. G. W. Barnes, wife of the local representative of Tydol, Miss Schweak and Miss Schline; Mrs. Mackey, Miss F. Mackey and Miss H. Lavy.

In the evening at Catskill there was a dinner for 200 Tydol dealers who heard of the new Triple X gas from experts, who told of the first Hi-Test gasoline featuring upper valve lubrication and the highest anti-knock rating.

Maple Sirup and Sugar U. S. and Canada Yield

Maple sugar and maple sirup are produced only in the United States and Canada. Not only is it purely an American industry, but a very old one, and one that we took over from the aboriginal inhabitants.

The earliest explorers found the Indians making sugar from the sap of maple trees in the St. Lawrence valley and elsewhere in the northeast, and when the Indians found that the white newcomers liked the maple products, they were the first to produce them in quantities for trade.

For many years among the early settlers of the northern part of the United States, maple sugar was the only sugar used, the imported cane sugar being beyond their means. It was these settlers who improved upon the Indians' method of tapping and boiling.

Sirup and sugar are produced chiefly from the sugar maple and the black maple. These trees are found throughout the eastern United States and Canada and as far south and west as Georgia and eastern Kansas. It is only in the northern United States and the adjacent parts of Canada, however, that production is important, the gradual spring of the north being necessary for a profitable flow.

According to requirements of the pure food and drug act, the sap must be reduced so that the sirup contains not less than 65 per cent total solids, and weighs not less than 11 pounds to the gallon.

FINANCIAL ROYALTY

The pomp and circumstance with which J. P. Morgan is escorted to Washington and put on the witness stand in a senatorial investigation of high finance suggests royalty rather than democracy. We have really created royalty, in spirit and practice, in this country—though in business rather than government. So strong is this tendency that even now, when the prestige of Big Business is deflated more than it has been since the House of Morgan was established, it becomes a sort of triumph and vindication of our political liberties, to put Wall Street potentates on the witness stand like ordinary citizens.

There was such a setting once before, when J. P. Morgan the Elder, in his old age, surrounded by anxious and fluttering relatives, was sworn and questioned by federal representatives in a financial inquiry. That historic inquisition was short and mild, and little more than a formality, conducted for the moral effect it would have on the country. The government felt obliged to show that such a thing could be done. In the present case, while there is still a suggestion of awe in the attitude of government inquisitors, they are really seeking important information, and expecting to get it, from Morgan and others of the inner circle of high finance.

Private banking is probably doomed. It is strange, considering the essentially public nature of banking, that it has continued so long as this, with such autocratic control as the Morgans have represented, in private hands. Both investment banking and deposit banking, especially the latter, are now coming under adequate public regulation.

HABITABLE CITIES

One of the problems of modern cities is the maintenance of their residence sections. Inhabitants insist on moving farther and farther out, often into suburbs where they cease to share in the cities' government while taking advantage of their business and cultural opportunities. The moving is perfectly natural. Dirt, smoke, encroaching industrial plants drive them out. Zoning is one of the remedies now being applied here and there. Better planning of apartment houses is another suggested remedy. When they are crowded together on narrow lots, allowing little light, air or space to occupants, they soon cease to be attractive to families with any interest in health and comfort.

Smoke and smells nuisances, declares a member of the American Institute of Architects, must be eliminated if cities are to keep their residence sections. In most cases, the existence of excess smoke indicates waste of fuel. It is a curious lack of intelligence which permits nuisances to exist which themselves mean losses to the companies producing them.

More and better parks and playgrounds in which beauty and esthetic values are maintained as well as amusement features are another civic need. Better distribution and control of traffic is essential. So, too, is slum elimination. Altogether, the cities have a big job ahead, but it is one well worth undertaking.

HELPING HISTORIANS.

One of the purposes of an organization called the Aristogenic Society is to record permanently, for the benefit of future generations, scientific data on the lives of ten great Americans of this decade. Dr. John Dewey is the first choice of the group. Life records, containing complete information of all kinds, will be prepared on special materials. There will be films and phonograph records covering every phase of the lives of the men selected. Special inks will be used to preserve samples of their handwriting.

Sixty-four great Americans of the present day are being studied in the effort to select the most important ten. The jury of 14 making the choices contains college presidents, statesmen, sociologists and religious leaders. They should be as competent as any group to prepare such a list. We of this age often wish we might know more of the great ones of past ages. It is natural to believe future generations will feel the same way about our leaders. Yet we may make mistakes in our efforts to preserve such records for future study. We may emphasize facts which will have little interest for posterity, and we may overlook completely persons whose importance, unrecognized now, will grow with history.

In signing the important Muscle Shoals bill, President Roosevelt sounded a warning something like the old British seamen's cry, "Ware shoal!" The dangers he warned against are those of speculation. Land speculators are said to have been planning a great boom in the Muscle Shoals area. They would! There is nothing that adventurous American promoters do more enthusiastically and successfully than turning glamorous public enterprises to their own profit. And American investors are peculiarly susceptible to such temptation. There has already been enough speculation around Muscle Shoals to last quite a while. In late years the speculators have been pretty forlorn. Now they hopefully plan to extend their operations on a scope commensurate with the government's vast plans. If they do, and if the public takes the bait, private gambling may wreck a great undertaking before it emerges from the experimental stage.

"SURGICAL" CONDITIONS

Some years ago a physician brought a case to a surgeon for operation. It was a tumor just above the knee and the X-ray showed that the bone had been fractured also. The patient had been in bed for months.

The surgeon remarked, "There is only one thing I can do and that is to remove the leg right at the hip joint. However perhaps the leg can be saved by the use of the X-ray, because those fellows (the X-ray specialists) seem to make considerable of our surgical work unnecessary. The patient was given a number of X-ray treatments, the leg was saved, and the patient returned to work. This happened in 1918, and showed that at that time the X-ray was doing work that lessened the amount of surgery thought necessary, and also showed that this surgeon, an outstanding surgeon, was big enough to admit it.

Lord Moynihan, president of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, one of the world's great surgeons, in broadcasting "The Future of Surgery" said: "Surgery has taken radium into partnership. The surgeon's knife in the most highly trained hands is an instrument of great delicacy and exquisite precision, but it cannot always tell the difference between healthy tissues and diseased tissues. Radium, when used properly, is an instrument of far greater delicacy, because it acts differently upon the diseased and healthy tissues, killing the one and leaving the other. Thus it is now true to say that certain mutilating operations have been virtually abolished, as, for instance, those concerned with the treatment of cancer in the mouth or on the tongue."

Radium has sometimes won victories where surgery could not have been used without heavy risk and grievous mutilation. It is therefore being tried in some earlier cases where heretofore surgery has offered the only prospect of cure.

I am quoting the generous remarks about the X-ray by a great surgeon in America and the equally generous remarks about radium by a great surgeon of Great Britain.

These men are big enough to admit that the X-ray and the radium can do as good work as surgery in some cases, and better work than surgery in others.

Meanwhile the world has now three methods of attack on what were formerly considered "surgical" conditions.

Chapter 17

SUE'S HIDING PLACE

I FLUNG myself toward her, and grasped her arm, and wrenched the pistol from her hand.

"You are entitled for this," I said. "I know what your purpose is here, of course. I suppose they promised you a lot of money to impersonate Miss Tally later on."

She looked at me sullenly. She said with a touch of defiant triumph: "I've seen you, too, when you didn't know it. I followed you all over the hotel yesterday afternoon, and you didn't know it. But you nearly caught me there at the door of 34."

It was this girl, then, not the priest. I shoved the letter I still held crumpled in one hand into my pocket and said:

"What have they done with Miss Tally?"

"Don't you wish you knew?" she said with more spirit than she'd yet displayed.

"Yes," I said truthfully. "Tell me, was it Lovschiem who killed Stravsky and Marcel and the priest?"

Her eyes shone with hate, and she was all at once powerful and vital. She said: "If it was Lovschiem, I'll kill him, and he knows it."

I wrenched the pistol from her hand.

I said slowly: "So it was Stravsky. He was your connection—"

"Don't speak of him," she cried. "He was a man. Lovschiem's a jellyfish."

"Look here," I said, feeling rather as if I had unleashed a revengeful panther. "Tell me where they've got Miss Tally, and I'll—if I can—I'll help you out of this."

"You may be right," she said finally, giving me a black look. "But I don't know. They promised me a lot of money."

"What good will money do you?—Stravsky—can't be brought back."

It was not as brutal as I thought it might be. She was fully aware that life was still to be lived, and that money was not a bad thing. She said again:

"They promised me a lot of money."

I DARED not wait. I dared not tempt her with the necessary care.

"What's your name?"

"Elise." I think she was rather accustomed to being beaten in life's struggles, for she said it dully.

"Tell me at once where they've got Miss Tally. Hurry up."

Probably I had strengthened what must have been a growing distrust of the Lovschiems. Which fact gave a curious sidelight on her life. She said, watching me:

"She's in the White Salon, I suppose. I was there. Grethe and Lovschiem pushed me, made me hide—that night."

Elise said. "Lovschiem"; Lovschiem, then, was not the man in the courtyard. I said:

"What do you mean? Quick."

She hesitated. "In the fireplace. It's just an old cupboard up above the ledge. I was there this morning when you found the priest."

"What! Did you know the body was there?"

"No! No! I swear it!" Her words burst out in a rapid flood. "I was in the north wing, and I heard you and Sue Tally coming, and I hid in the White Salon. First I was going to get behind a curtain—that's when I dropped my handkerchief. But you and that girl talked and talked, and I was tired, and you heard me take a long breath and—"

I cut into her swift, confused explanations.

"Come with me."

"Oh, no—not to the White Salon. They'll kill me, too."

"No, I'm not taking you there. Just to a room down the hall. Come. You'll be safe."

I took her to Mrs. Byng's room. When Mrs. Byng opened the door, I simply thrust the girl inside. I said:

"I can't explain. Keep this girl here. Don't let her call anyone. Do you know how to shoot?"

Mrs. Byng was superb. She lifted her nose, gave a delighted sniff, and said:

"Give me the gun."

I ran through the corridors, hoping at every turn for the sight of a gendarme. There was none.

Then I was at the door of the White Salon. I laid a cautious hand on the knob, and holding my revolver before me tried to peer into the darkness of the room.

There was no sound, and it was entirely black.

I went to the fireplace. My eyes were becoming accustomed to the dark, but I longed for some kind of light. I could see no closet.

"Sue," I whispered in the silence. "Sue."

There was a little rustle from inside the wall about the height of my head.

I bent over and rolled up the fire screen. The space seemed very large. I ducked under the mantel breast.

I groped into the darkness, met cold wall—and a ledge. And my groping hand suddenly encountered two feet bound together at the ankles.

It was Sue.

She said, when I removed the gag, that she wasn't hurt, but she clung to me, and I could feel her heart beating, and her breath.

All at once I realized that we must get out of the ill-omened room. I took her cautiously into my room next door. I put her in a chair—she was trembling with cold and with the reaction of released terror.

I took my heavy flannel dressing gown and put it around Sue, and I took her wholly into my arms and held her, and I kissed her and kissed her and was never so happy in my life.

SHE told me briefly how the Lovschiems had been there in the corridor beside her room. She'd gone to turn on the light, and Lovschiem had simply clapped his fat hand over her mouth and lifted her into the corridor and some woman flashed inside the room and Grethe whispered sharply that if Sue screamed, the woman who'd gone into Sue's room would kill Sundeen.

"I have the token," I said rapidly. "It was hidden in the priest's room."

"You have—" She paused. "But how did you know what it was? It can't be—you don't know."

She watched me unroll the small thin paper. I held it toward her, and she gave a little gasp.

"Why—you—" It was a sort of gasp. "This—this is the token—but it is not my half. It is my brother's half."

"Then your brother—"

"The priest—was my brother. The priest was Francis!"

FILMS IN LUXURY CLASS; BULGARIAN MOVIES CLOSE

Some houses showed the same film three times before giving up the struggle.

More than 6,000 operators and other employes have been discharged and have joined the exhibitors in appeals to the government.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Traveling an airline distance of less than 20 miles, the Royal Canyon line of the Rapid City, Black Hills and Western Railroad Company in South Dakota, goes 25 miles by rail, turns enough curves to make 14 complete circles, crosses the same river 105 times, climbs or descends 1790 feet.

Well deserving its title as the "Crookedest Railroad in the World," the Rapid Canyon line is built along, and all over, the river that runs along the bottom of the canyon. The canyon is crooked, but the river is even more so, and engineers found that to lay a line between Mystic and Rapid City it was necessary to put in 105 bridges. Even then it was necessary to lay 35 miles of track between the two cities—an airline distance of 19½ miles.

The many curves on the line, according to F. E. Clarity, president, would make 15 complete circles. Some of the curves are very sharp, many being from 18 to 22 degrees.

The Rapid City line was built as a feeder line for mining and agricultural freight, but when it was completed it proved to be a valuable attraction to tourists.

The bank without a vault, of which Mr. Fraser is president, is the Bank for International Settlements—a financial institution which does an immense banking business throughout the world, but has no place to keep its gold or other valuables, because it handles none. The bank deals with governments in financial settlements, acting as a clearing house for international financial business.

The musical motto, given above, is: Be Flat never, be sharp sometimes; be natural always.

At The Cave

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Willy Nilly told the driver of the truck how to get to the road nearest the cave. As they approached it Willy Nilly saw poor Rip lying on the ground.

"What happened to Rip?" Willy Nilly cried.

"I'm—all—right," Rip managed to whisper.

"Tell the farmer to look in the cave and then look at the Wild Cat just in front. Rip killed him after a terrible battle," Top Notch explained.

There was the Wild Cat, forever stopped from lamb stealing and there in the cave were the remains of the last lamb he had stolen and had not finished eating.

"You're right," the farmer said to Willy Nilly. "Wild Cats do go for lambs sometimes and the proof is before me. I owe you an apology."

Jelly Bear and Honey Bear were free at last, and the farmer went back for liniment and bandages for Rip and helped all he could to make up for the trouble he had caused. But Willy Nilly hardly noticed him, so anxious was he about poor Rip.

"Oh, Rip," Willy Nilly said. "I gave you the name of Rip because you used to rip up everything. But now you've let yourself be ripped up in order to save our Jelly Bear and Honey Bear."

Rip was too weak to speak, too weak to move, but he gave a little, feeble, tiny wag of his tail just to show that he understood what Willy Nilly was saying and was thankful for it.

"Surely," thought Willy Nilly desperately, "if a dog can wag his tail even a little bit, he'll get well." But he didn't feel sure. Rip was a very sick dog.

Former Kingston Girl Awarded Fellowship

Mrs. Carlotta Petrina of Brooklyn, daughter of Gilbert P. Mrs. Petrina was graduated from the Kingston High School and made a record as one of the most brilliant students ever to graduate from that institution.

The aim of the Guggenheim Fund, which was established in memory of Senator Guggenheim's oldest son, who died in 1922 when he was 17 years old, is to foster the work of persons of exceptional talent. At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "Today We Live." British youth caught in the maelstrom of the World War is the subject of this unusual talkie, with a splendid cast headed by Joan Crawford and Gary Cooper, and supported by the capable playing of Franchot Tone and Robert Young. It's the story of three British people, a girl, her brother, and her lover. All are swept into the war when a rich American comes over to England and rents their ancestral home. The girl and the American fall in love, and numerous complications develop. There are some of the most thrilling war scenes ever filmed in this talkie, and the direction of Howard Hawkes insures fast and abundant action. The work of Miss Crawford is exceptional, while Gary Cooper, Robert Young and Franchot Tone all add new laurels to their picture popularity. Something to see.

Orpheum: "Tess of the Storm Country" and "Flaming Guns." Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, the screen's most lovable romantic team, are together for the last time in this sea story of a poor girl and a rich boy, who find happiness together after their full share of difficulties. "Flaming Guns" is also Tom Mix's last screen appearance in a western yarn that isn't quite up to the Mix standard, although there is plenty of action and excitement.

Broadway: "Evenings for Sale". Herbert Marshall, Sari Maritza, Charles Ruggles, Lucien Littlefield and Mary Boland are all together in this rhythmic talkie that is grand entertainment. Mary Boland as the millionaire American widow who goes to Vienna to see it as the romantic land of her dreams runs into all types of comedy and romance, while the aid of beautiful sets, perfect direction, and enjoyable music all lent charm to this production. Herbert Marshall is well cast in the role of a poverized count and he scores another personal triumph, while Sari Maritza has been given her best part since coming to America. Light entertainment, worth seeing.

Tomorrow.

Kingston: "Too Busy to Work." The inimitable Will Rogers is at it again in another talkie fitted to his talents. This one is taken from the story "Junilo", and Mr. Rogers goes dramatic in several scenes. Marian Nixon and Dick Powell are also in the cast.

Orpheum: Same.

Broadway: "The Conquerors". Three generations of American history pass in review in this gigantic story of the United States since 1870. Excitement, action, and the sweep of great events all are linked in this latest talkie starring Richard Dix, and it is his best work since the famous "Cimarron". Ann Harding, Edna May Oliver, and Guy Kibbee head a cast of hundreds. Grand entertainment.

KERHONKSON

FASHIONS By ELEANOR GUNN

Tennis Styles Go to Court

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild.

A back treatment that may be either high, or low in V shape, is a feature of the maize rough crepe frock at left fashioned with split cap sleeves. The seamed detail on the bodice is effective.

Dusty pink rough crepe makes a two-piece frock interesting for cartridge pleated sleeves, deep shoulder yoke and buttoned front. The close neckline fashion is adhered to and finished with tab ends.

Fashions with a Past Have A Future

New York—After a comparatively long time during which period fashions were of no importance, we are apparently entering another when they will be of tremendous interest. Victorian fashions are of course period fashions, but they have been so successively revived that we are beginning not to think of them as such but as contemporary. It is their success that has inspired designers to turn up something from the past and give it a future.

Mention has already been made of Mexican colorings and ideas as applied to costume design. Chinese and Japanese motives are what we Occidentals get out of the situation in Manchuria and thereabouts. The model sketched is a charming interpretation of a Geisha girl costume with the sash or obi bowed at the back in a characteristic butterfly.

At the mid-season openings held in Paris early in May comment was made on the period influences which were offered. There were, for instance, several coats fastening in the Chinese manner.

Some of the loveliest of the new prints worn this season have a suggestion of Japanese prints, this being true of thise in gray and neutral shades with wavery lines of chalky white.

Mexican designs and colors are naturally bolder. They are therefore much in use for sports clothes, especially for the beach.

In fashion, designers have their own league of nations and do not hesitate to form strange alliances which are more successful in costume design than they would be politically. These same astute designers succeed also in making east and west not only meet but mingle.

More Navy Recruits

Navy blue is steadily on the up and up in formal fashions, particularly for evening. Satin in patterned effects rates newest, with white stripes and dots representing the idea in patterns. The stripes are the very newest, working up into costumes that can be as formal as any demand makes of evening frock. The dot on navy in satin is "in" strongly in daytimes dresses, being already in current styles being worn, and very definitely on the calendar for a long spring and summer success.

MADAME BUTTERFLY

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild.

Moire broche is used for this Madame Butterfly negligee, in a blue shade like acquamarine, faced with matching satin down the front and girdled with satin and bright red velvet.

CHILE TRIES MILITARY DRILL TO BALANCE RED TEACHING

Santiago, Chile (AP)—Military and civic training in all schools has been instituted by Chile in its campaign against communism.

Several hundred teachers recently were dismissed when it was proven that they either were members of communist "cells" or had taught communistic ideas.

Domingo Duran, minister of education, and Emilio Bello, minister of defense, drew up the new courses. All pupils are to be given military training, starting from the first grade and continuing through the university.

Civic training will aim at instilling sincere love of country in the rising generation.

"We have communism on the run, and these new courses will make real citizens of our children," said Senor Duran.

OUR DAILY PATTERN

A Dainty Frock

7860. This model expresses youth and grace in its simple stylish lines. The puff sleeve joins the lengthened shoulder lines. It is a popular sleeve style, finished with an elastic band to hold the fulness at any place on the upper arm that seems most pleasing. V shaped yoke sections lend attractive seaming on the straight line skirt. The waist is slightly full at the waistline. The sash and sleeve may be of self or contrasting material. Embroidered and plain handkerchief linen in combination will be nice for this frock. Gingham with organdy or printed with plain taffeta is also suggested.

Designed in 6 sizes: 14, 16, 18 and 20, with corresponding bust: 33½, 35, 36½ and 38, also in 40 and 42 bust. Size 16 if made as in the large view will require 3 yards of 25 inch material together with ⅞ yard of 39 inch contrasting material for sleeves and sash. If made without contrast, it will require 3 2-3 yards. The sash if of ribbon requires 2½ yards. The width of the dress at the lower edge is 2 yards.

Japan's Trade Follows Flag Into Jehol City

By JAMES A. MILLS

Jehol City (AP)—Japan rapidly is turning attention to commercial development of this newly-conquered province for the benefit of her own people and of the state of Manchukuo.

Heretofore Jehol was regarded as a part of Mongolia, and there was scarcely a single Japanese within the 65,000 square miles that constitute the province.

"American Bar" Appears

Now, however, Japanese merchants and concession-seekers are pouring into this capital and other large cities.

The first Japanese institution to make its appearance here was an "American Bar", run by a former Japanese sailor. It is liberally patronized by soldiers. Geisha girls, who invariably follow the army, also are filtering into Jehol.

The Japanese army authorities, in cooperation with Manchukuo officials, are setting up new civil administrations in the cities, towns and villages. The former Chinese local officials, who fled before the Japanese invasion, are being urged to return on promise that they will be restored to their old positions.

Summer May Bring Trouble

Except for occasional raids by bandits and local shootings, complete peace and order reign in Jehol. With the coming of the warm weather, however, it is expected the thousands of former Chinese soldiers and brigands who scattered into the hills, will emerge from their hiding places.

These disbanded soldiers constitute a menace not only to the Japanese and Manchukuo armies, but also to the natives, who may be forced to house and feed them and supply them with money.

To cope with this danger the Japanese are placing small Japanese and Manchukuo garrisons at strategic points.

Western Border Tense

The situation along the western border fronting the Chahar area remains disturbed. Tens of thousands of Chinese troops, fearing the Japanese intend to drive for Kalgan, in Inner Mongolia, are stationed along this frontier. Several clashes have occurred.

News from the World on Wheels

Ready for trial and use by motorists in New York and New England, a brand new motor fuel called Socony Mobilgas is announced by the Standard Oil Company of New York, Inc. This new product introduces to the motor car owners of Soconyland "Climatic Control" combined with the highest anti-knock quality ever offered in a regular-price gasoline. Climatic Control is highly important to car owners, because by it Socony Mobilgas delivers full power regardless of weather changes which offset engine performance. Every motorist knows that in the course of a day's driving he encounters changes of weather and altitude. Alternations of rain, shine, hot, cool, high, low, are by no means unusual. But the average motorist is not so thoroughly aware how these changes raise or lower the engine heat which controls the turning of liquid gasoline into gasoline vapor in an engine, and in turn affects power and performance. Socony-Vacuum engineers naturally could not control the weather so their job was to control the reaction of gasoline to the weather. By Climatic Control they have pre-adjusted the specifications of Socony-Mobilgas so that it automatically adapts itself to variations of engine heat. Working in special testing chambers at temperatures as high as 150 degrees and as low as 20 degrees below zero, the engineers verified the performance of Socony Mobilgas with Climatic Control under laboratory conditions representing hot and cold weather driving.

Al Terpening, local representative of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, predicts that the winning car in the 500-mile auto classic at Indianapolis, Ind., on Memorial Day will be equipped with Firestone Hi-Speed tires. This race is known as the battle of tires, due to the high speed and the track construction. It is a grueling test for tires.

IBN SAUD, KING OF ARABIA, LEADS 400,000 FIGHTERS

Cairo (AP).—"My aim is the unity of Moslems and for this I shall always be ready to fight," said King Ibn Saud, ruler of Arabia, in an address to the chief 1933 pilgrims to Mecca. He continued:

"I am head of 400,000 combatants, ready to obey my instructions. These are the troops of the union. They have no other aim but the glory of Islam.

"I have crushed all my enemies. They said I wanted to be caliph, but I never claimed this. The caliph's duty would be to make the religious doctrines of Islam uniform among Moslems in every part of the world. No man could do that in these days."

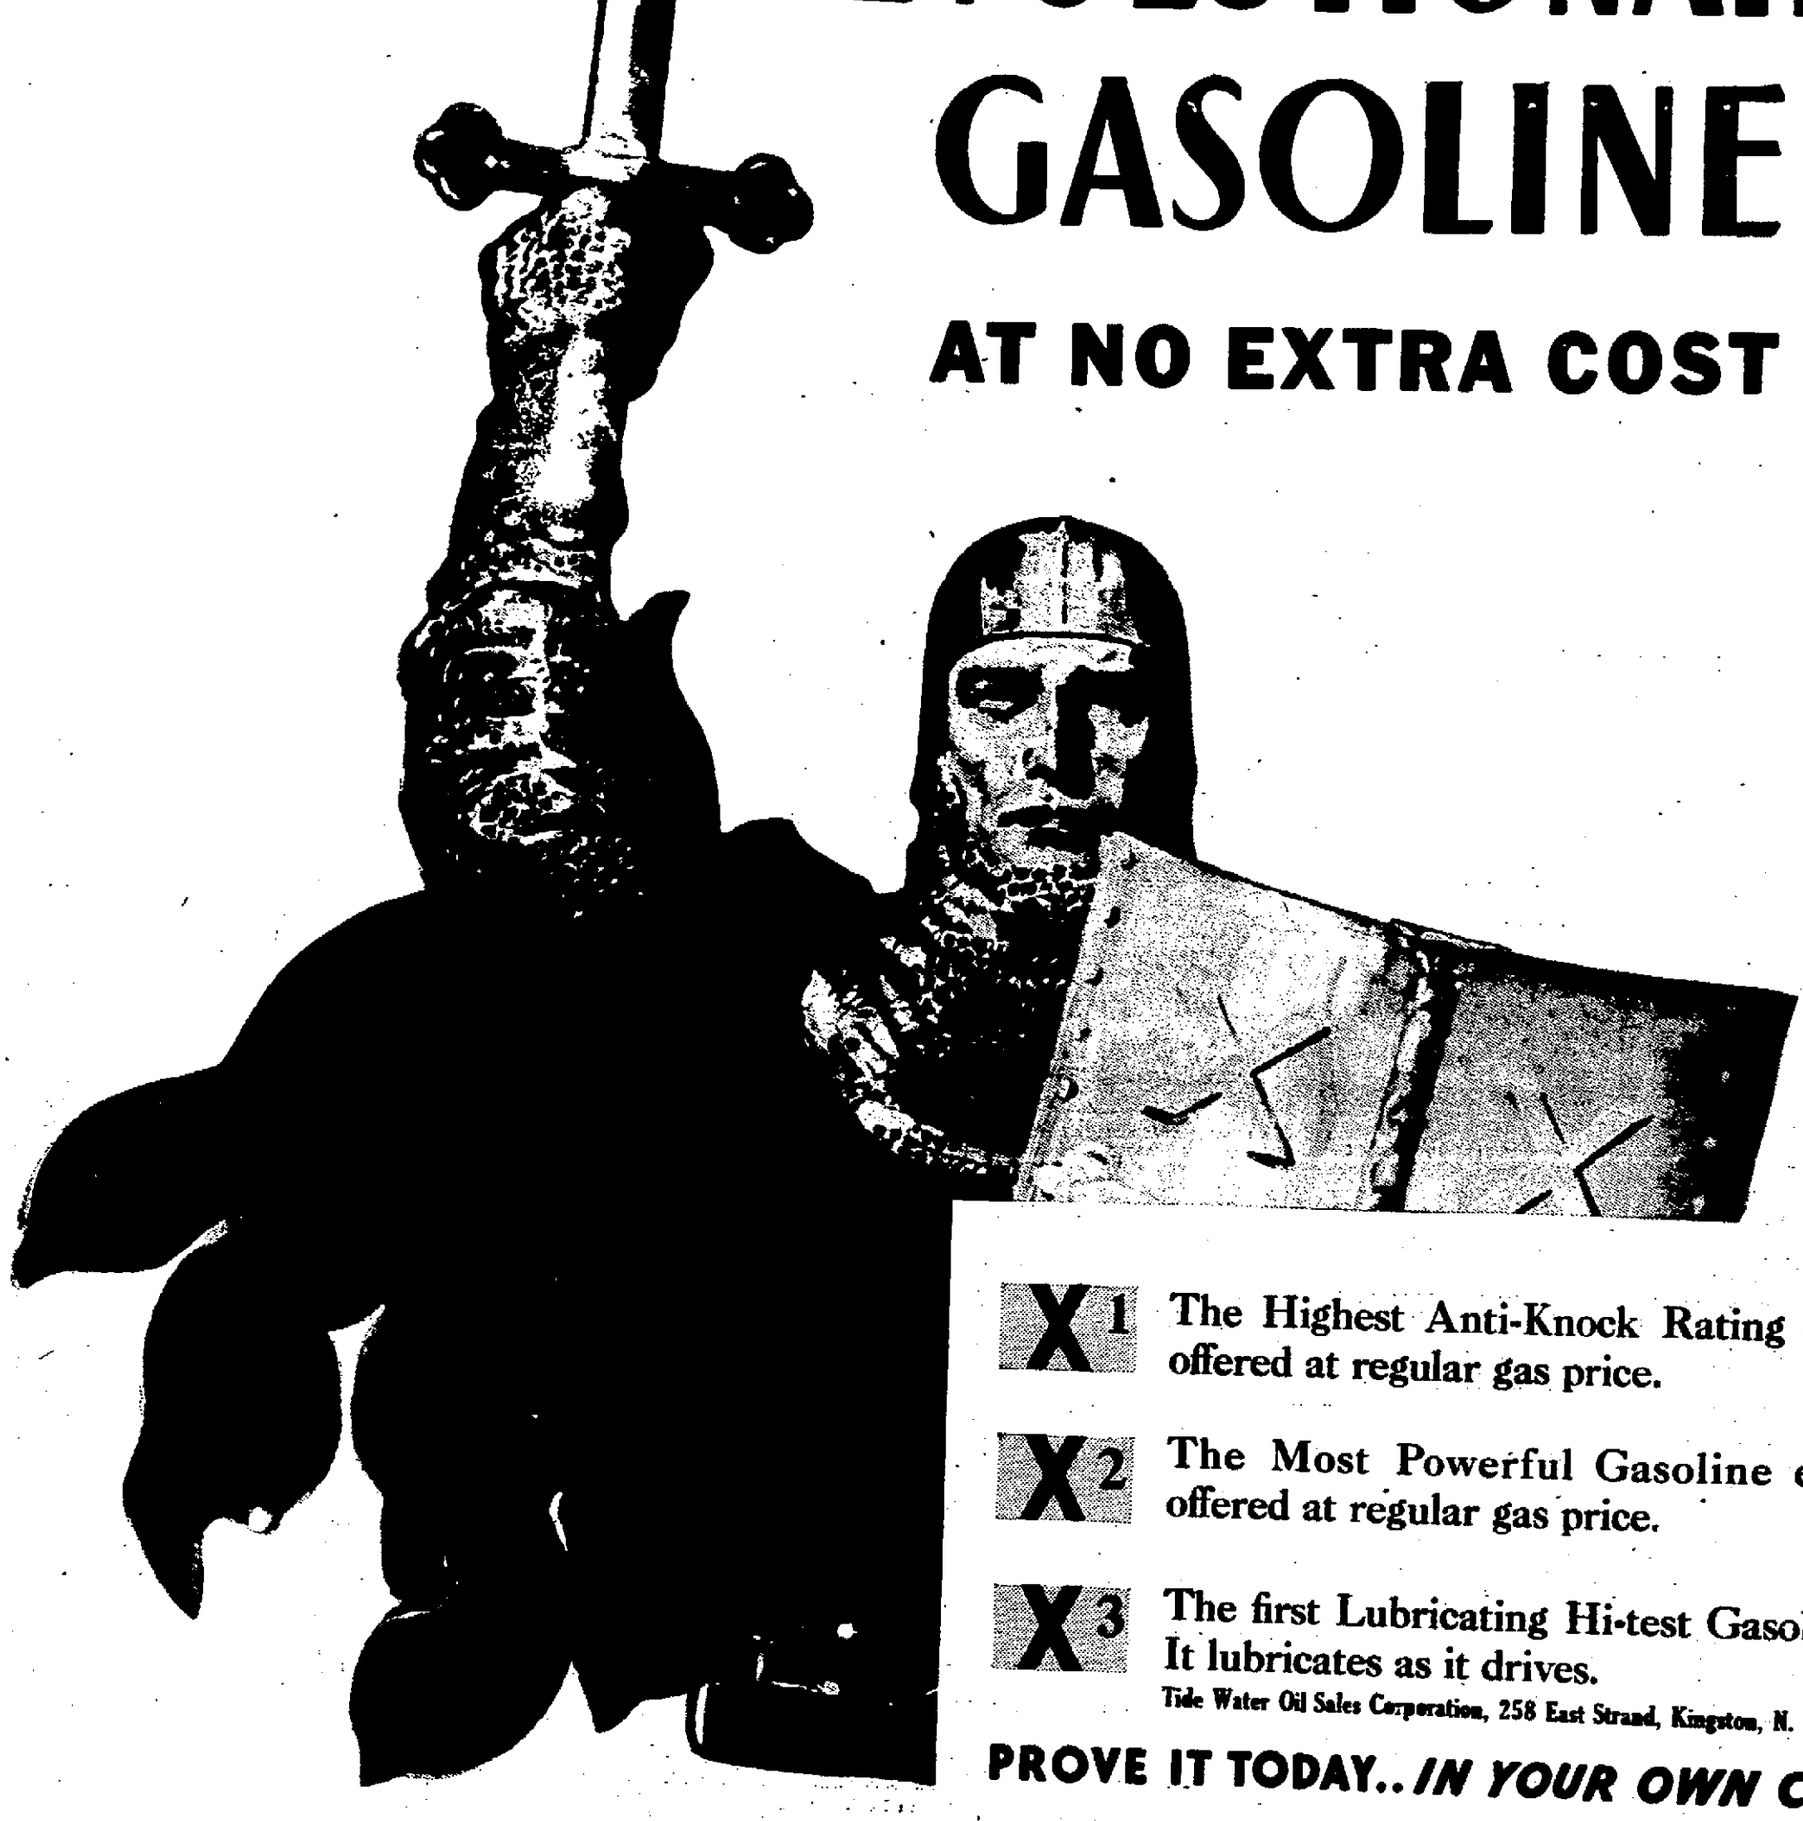

To Open Ole Red Barn.

Earl Dean of New York city, who for the past few years has been managing the Ole Red Barn in Ashokan, will again open that establishment on Memorial Day, and every Tuesday evening thereafter will hold a dance during the summer season. Mr. Dean has engaged Alve Black and his Hi-Hatters to furnish the music. The Ole Red Barn is situated on the north side of the reservoir, on Route 28.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—In this unreel parade:

Some of the things that made the nineties less gay than they're supposed to have been add nothing to the gaiety of directors.

A crowd scene, especially, is cluttered with Victorian difficulties in costuming and properties that were the last word in smartness and convenience in the closing decade of the last century. In this age, what a nuisance!

Such Fun!

Stephen Roberts had a crowd to handle in the street-fair scenes of "One Sunday Afternoon." It was a gay crowd, rilling through the fairground with its flamboyant sideshows, its horse-drawn merry-go-round, its candy-venders and barkers.

The scene apparently required a deal of head-scratching in the studio research department. There was even the stand of a traveling country dentist, advertised by an enormous set of false teeth which opened and closed at the pull of a rope by an attendant.

Children swarmed the place in quaint little dresses and suits; women in the last gasp of the mode swished about; and men in pancake hats and natty suits, some wearing linen dusters, promenaded through the hurly-burly.

Everything was exactly right, technically perfect.

The horses, too suited the period. But the nag that hauled an atmosphere couple in a buggy past the carnival gate balked. All the careful planning of that scene, the carefully "natural" movements of the crowd, the placing of groups here and there, had gone for naught—at least as far as that horse was concerned.

Flashbacks And Previews

James Cagney, screen bad boy of many tough roles, has bought a home in the Hollywood hills, and now is helping Edward G. Robinson, hero of even tougher parts, in a house-hunt.

Cagney bought his own place, to which he added a swimming pool, as a present for his wife. She preferred a house to jewels—"Bandits can't carry off a home," she said.

Mary McLaren, once bright star of silent pictures, is at work in talkies again—May Robson's name was really Mary Robinson,—she changed it after a printing error on her first stage program shortened it—Jack Holt is doing his first role behind make-up and whiskers in the earthquake picture, "The Wrecker."

FAULTY NUTRITION MENACE TO YOUNG

Survey Reveals Condition Is Widespread.

Chicago, Ill.—Asserting that the health and efficiency of the coming generation is seriously threatened by a prevailing condition of faulty nutrition, Miss Anna E. Boller, dietitian of Rush Medical college and head of the National Live Stock and Meat board's department of nutrition, urges parents to use every care in planning an adequate diet for their children.

"The condition is wide-spread in extent and alarming in its significance," said Miss Boller. "Evidence of the gravity of the situation was brought forcibly to my attention by a survey in which I recently participated among a representative group of school children. It was found that approximately 90 per cent of this group, picked at random, had developed nutritional anemia in varying degrees. More than half of the cases were markedly or very markedly anemic.

Diet Out of Balance.

"Information secured in the survey indicated strongly that a diet out of balance rather than a lack of food was the basic cause of this condition in the majority of these children. In the case of 60 per cent of this group, the amount of protein, especially meat, in the diet was extremely limited, a fact which may have contributed materially to the anemic condition."

Miss Boller pointed out that modern research has revealed the high value of liver for the prevention and treatment of anemia, this discovery being recognized as an outstanding scientific achievement. She stated that in addition to the iron, so necessary in combatting anemia, liver is such an excellent source of other nutrients, including vitamins, that it would seem advisable to include it in the child's diet at least once a week.

According to Miss Boller, malnutrition in children may be manifested by various symptoms, including marked overweight as well as marked underweight for height and age, an abnormal color, fatigue posture, lack of endurance, and inattention at school. Although the extent to which this condition may bring about permanent injurious effects is dependent upon various factors, it is her opinion that if long continued, serious results are inevitable.

Ideal Daily Diet.

Miss Boller outlined the ideal daily diet for a child as consisting of milk, meat, egg, cooked and uncooked fruit, vegetables including potatoes and one cooked and one uncooked vegetable, orange or tomato juice, cereal, bread and butter. These foods provide such essential elements as protein for growth and for tissue repair, iron for building blood, phosphorus and calcium for strong bones and healthy teeth, and the vitamins necessary to general health.

In conclusion Miss Boller called the attention of parents to the fact that they may well consider the less-demanded cuts of meat in planning the children's menus. She said that these cuts are just as desirable in flavor and food value as the so-called select cuts and that present prices make them available for even the most restricted budgets.

Naturalist Discloses Beneficial Wild Life

St. Louis.—A study of the eating habits of wild life in America has disclosed 90 per cent of our animals and birds are beneficial, according to Donald A. Gilchrist, naturalist.

Gilchrist is supervisor of predatory animals and rodents for the federal government in six midwestern states.

He recently aided in the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, which looked into the stomachs of more than 2,000,000 birds and animals to determine the species which are valuable to agriculture and which are predatory.

Odd Inscription Found on Coin Minted in 1787

Two Extremes Live Nearby.

Provincetown, Mass. — Massachusetts' oldest and youngest judges live on Cape Cod, only a few miles apart. They are Judge Robert A. Welsh, thirty years old, of Provincetown, and Judge Charles Bassett of Chatham, who soon will observe his ninetieth birthday anniversary.

Dog Collects Mail, Chews Up Circular

London—Miss Margery Wyn, the actress, has a fox terrier that not only carries the post at home, but when he is away picks up from the doormat any letter written by his mistress—leaving the others behind.

One day Miss Wyn's letter arrived at the same time as a circular. Peter took both to his basket—and chewed up the circular.

He can weep, smoke a pipe and salute like a soldier.

If Peter is locked out he just knocks on the knocker till the door is opened.

To Be Modern At All, A Home Must Have MODERN WIRING

TO RENT OR SELL, a home in these days of stiff competition, you must, of course bring it up-to-date electrically, with plenty of outlets in every room.

It is even more important to have ample electric service in the home in which you live, since without it you cannot take advantage of the low-priced electricity that today raises living standards without raising living costs.

WIRING costs, both for materials and services were never lower than now, and they will probably not be as low again. Consult your electrical contractor today, to secure a suggested layout for electrical modernizing and an estimate of costs.

GIFT TAX TALK HASTENS SWEDISH GENEROSITY

Stockholm (AP).—Possibility of a higher gift tax is causing an unusual show of generosity.

Since the first of the year the governor-general has received 892 gift declarations as against 106 for the same time in 1932.

Newspapers estimate that the present tax yielded the government more than $400,000 in March as compared with less than $7,000 for the same month last year.

The higher levy has been proposed as a check on people who seek to evade the inheritance tax.

SOCONY
Mobilgas

HIGHEST ANTI-KNOCK AT THE REGULAR PRICE WITH

CLIMATIC CONTROL

TOMORROW a new motor fuel goes on sale in New York and New England; new and better in test and performance.

A NEW NAME—Socony Mobilgas, quality mate to Mobiloil, the first-choice motor oil among motorists here—and the world over.

A NEW IDEA—Socony Mobilgas has the exclusive feature of Climatic Control, a scientific improvement, originated by Socony-Vacuum, which prevents loss of power and mileage with weather changes.

A NEW ANTI-KNOCK VALUE—Through a new process, Socony Mobilgas with Climatic Control offers you the highest anti-knock quality you have ever been able to get at the regular price.

WHAT IS CLIMATIC CONTROL?

All gasoline is extremely sensitive to weather changes. Your own experience undoubtedly has shown you how engine performance varies with driving conditions. Every daily variation in the weather from hot to cold, from rain to shine, raises or lowers engine heat, and engine heat is the factor which turns liquid gasoline into gasoline vapor and into effective horsepower.

Climatic Control—originated by Socony-Vacuum—is the pre-adjustment of the specifications of Socony Mobilgas so that, at either high or low altitude, it automatically adapts itself to the daily—even hourly—weather changes, thus preventing loss of power and mileage.

Climatic Control, therefore, is what you must have in a gasoline to make you independent of weather changes that affect ordinary gasolines.

And only Socony Mobilgas has Climatic Control!

Climatic Control has been proved in the laboratory. It has been tested under a variety of outdoor conditions far more severe than you'll ever encounter. It has met with outstanding satisfaction in the cars of hundreds of thousands of motorists in test areas of widely varied climatic and road conditions. You can depend upon it.

TRY IT TOMORROW

Fill your tank with the brand-new Socony Mobilgas tomorrow. Thrill to its higher anti-knock performance. Feel the difference in power, regardless of weather changes. Check the mileage economy. And, remember that you get this new and better gasoline, plus the exclusive feature of Climatic Control, at no increase in price. Buy it once and you will buy it again.

GUM-FREE—The new Socony Mobilgas is gum-free. You avoid the annoyance and expense resulting from gum-sticking valves and other parts.

Discounting Notes

Bank discount is the deduction a bank makes from the face value of a note for cashing it before it is due. It is computed in the same way as simple interest, except that it is taken in advance, interest being charged from date of discounting to date note is due. If the bank or other organization that has discounted the note should again dispose of it in a similar manner to another organization before it is due, it is to be rediscounted.

Talks to parents

The Tough Phase

By ALICE JUDSON PEALE

A mother tells that her 8-year-old son suddenly became a "tough guy," thought his pretty suits were sissy, insisted upon wearing overalls, and talked slang out of the side of his mouth. He experimented with lying and played hookey from school.

She decided that the best way of handling him was not to check him directly, but to keep him extremely busy about the house, under her watchful eye, so that he could not get into mischief. She had him sweep and shake out rugs, rake the lawn, help with the dishes, polish brass, wash up the bath-room floor, make his own bed and keep his room in order.

This regime soon showed him that it was no use being tough and in a short time toned down his cocky ways.

The treatment from the mother's point of view was a complete success, but was it so surely wise? The tough phase to this little boy undoubtedly represented an approximation of a new ideal of manliness. He had but recently left the nursery behind him, he was proud of being a big boy and unfortunately chose not the best way of showing it.

Surely this cockiness was valuable somewhere in his development.

One may well doubt the wisdom of subduing him so promptly and thoroughly once more into the convenient mother's-good-little-boy pattern of behavior.

Another way of meeting the problem would have been to regard the new obstreperousness as a passing phase and to have allowed the child to let off as much steam as possible in play with other children. While insisting merely upon a minimum of conformity at home it might have been possible to find tasks which would have appealed to him as being manly and grown-up.

PLEDGED MILLIONS TO GET TAX STAMPS

Humorous Incident of Recent Banking Holiday.

By WILLIAM L. BRUCKART

Washington.—Now that the banking holiday of ten days in March is only a nightmare of memory, some of the humorous situations that it developed have come to light. One of them involved a great tobacco manufacturing company, and the length to which it had to go to obtain the tiny revenue stamps which the manufacturers are required by law to affix to each package of cigarettes before the package leaves the factory.

The bureau of internal revenue can sell the tax stamps only for cash. It is not uncommon for a tobacco company to have as much as a couple of million dollars tied up in such stamps. But the supply dwindles rapidly, and so during the banking holiday every large factory ran short of stamps. It also was without money with which to buy them from the collectors of internal revenue.

Bureau officials here, after consultation with the treasury, agreed to allow the collectors to sell the stamps if the tobacco companies buying them would put up government bonds in lieu of cash until funds could be obtained. The plan worked splendidly with all save one of the greatest companies. It held no government bonds. All of its money was in banks and the banks, of course, were closed. The situation was dark. A new appeal was made to the bureau. After further consultation, the bureau agreed to let the company have stamps without cash, but before it did so it required and obtained a resolution from the company's board of directors by which it pledged to the government all of its property, cash in bank and everything else as surety for payment of its bill for tax stamps. The capital stock of the company is well in excess of $50,000,000.

New Scheme to Improve Grammar of Students

Athens, Ohio.—A unique method of improving English grammar has been instituted by the Ohio university department of English of the college of education, here.

All instructors in the college report to the English department the names of students heard making errors in grammar. These students are then asked to report to Dr. H. R. Wilson to arrange conference with graduate students in English who will give instruction to remedy the mistakes.

English students of the college are also jotting down errors in grammar heard in conversation, over the radio, and by other means. Each instructor in the college of education is requested to make known to his students a desire that they should express themselves accurately and efficiently.

The plan has the indorsement of all of the English teachers on the campus and a form letter for students reported has been devised. No compulsory examination in English is now used before graduation; one may be planned if the present method works successfully.

Fertile Farm Tract in Iowa Never Cultivated

Manchester, Iowa.—Although Iowa is a comparatively young state, there exists in the state only one sizable tract of virgin prairie land. All the rest, at some time, has been turned by the plow.

This tract of untouched prairie is owned by Charles C. Barry, seventy-seven years old, a retired farmer here.

The land was purchased by Barry's father from the federal government in 1856 for $1.25 an acre. Barry still possesses the original grant, a sheepskin deed bearing the signature of President James Buchanan. The prairie is tillable and highly fertile, but never was cultivated because it was located a mile distant from the remainder of the farm, said Barry.

Abandoned Mines Used for Mushroom Business

Greensburg, Pa.—Abandoned coal mines have been utilized by Westmoreland county residents in a business that has earned thousands of dollars within the past few years—mushroom growing.

The dark hillside caverns, with an even temperature of between 55 and 60 degrees, were found to be ideal for mushroom culture. M. L. Rose, county treasurer, is among those who began growing mushrooms in the mines. Many now have built large concrete houses to handle their rapidly growing business.

Odd Will of Texas Real Estate Man Is Upheld

Fort Worth, Texas.—The will of a wealthy realtor, J. N. Brooker, requesting that his $700,000 estate be held in trust until 21 years after the death of the last legatee, has been upheld by courts here.

Two brothers contested the will, claiming it violated public policy by keeping the property and bonds out of circulation for a long period and hindered perpetuity of the estate.

Pompadour Home for Sale

Paris.—The Hotel des Reservoirs at Versailles is for sale. Its cellar containing 2,500 bottles of rare wines and brandies, has been sold. The hotel was built between 1732 and 1753, the elder wing being formerly the residence of Mme. de Pompadour.

Italy Prepares Speedy Mystery Plane For Fresh Assault On World Record

Ultimate plane speed of 600 miles an hour is the goal of Italy, which now holds the record of 426.5 miles. The pictures show Francesco Agello and the "Red Bullet," in which he set that mark.

Desenzano, Italy (AP)—Spurred by her recapture of the world speed record, Italy is preparing new efforts to attain the 600 miles an hour velocity which her air minister, General Italo Balbo, says is within sight of aviation.

A mystery ship being assembled at the government high speed school here is almost ready for trial flights.

Feel Sure Of New Mark

The men working on it will be surprised if it reaches anything like the mark General Balbo has set, but they expect it to surpass the 426.5 miles an hour recently made by Warrant Officer Francesco Agello in his "Red Bullet."

Balbo says it may take a man a decade to find the means of propelling himself through the atmosphere at 10 miles a minute. It is practically certain though that by then he will have achieved such speed, he recently told the Senate.

Meanwhile the mark is being pushed steadily forward. Agello's record was 20 miles an hour faster than the mark set by the English lieutenant, O. H. Stainforth, in 1931. On one lap above Lake Garda the Italian made 432.8 miles an hour, but the record was calculated on the average.

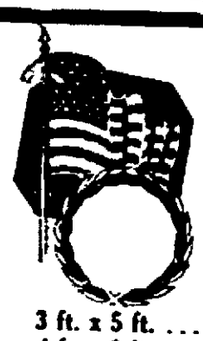

Record Just A Try-Out

The greatest secrecy surrounds the preparation of the new ship. Official confirmation of its existence has been limited to a statement that it is expected to set a "considerably higher speed" than the "Red Bullet." Agello's flight was described as merely a "preparatory demonstration."

A departure from the ordinary means of propulsion is the "Bullet's" principal feature. Two propellers set on a sleeved shaft, one behind the other at the nose of the fuselage, turn in opposite directions. They are driven by a 24-cylinder "V" type motor of 2,800 horsepower.

The plane, painted red, is set on pontoons. It has a single low wing of duraluminum and a metal body with wooden tail surfaces.

Agello, 30 years old, has been flying since 1924. He has been attached to the school for five years.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt's selection of James M. Cox of Ohio as a member of the American delegation to the London economic conference again shows him loyal to an old friend.

JAMES M. COX

Cox and Roosevelt were democratic running mates in the 1920 race for the presidency and vice presidency, respectively.

Roosevelt is staking much on the success of the London conference. His conversations in Washington with world leaders followed by his plea to all nations for peace and good will is evidence of that. It would seem, therefore, that the President's one-time associate has been given a task of the greatest importance.

One of Roosevelt's first appointments to high position was that of Josephus Daniels as ambassador to Mexico. Daniels was secretary of the navy when Roosevelt was assistant secretary.

An Eye On Silver

The choice of Senator Pittman as a member of the delegation came as no surprise to Washington observers. Not only is the Nevada senator among the President's closest legislative advisers, but the fact that he is chairman of the senate's foreign relations committee and president pro tempore of the senate also virtually assured him of a place on the delegation.

There's another factor in the selection of Pittman as well, and a very important one. Silver seems destined to have a position of great prominence in the discussions at London. Pittman is a recognized authority on this question in the senate.

Across Party Lines

As observers awaited announcement of the choice of the republican senator on the delegation, the gossip favored McNary of Oregon from the start.

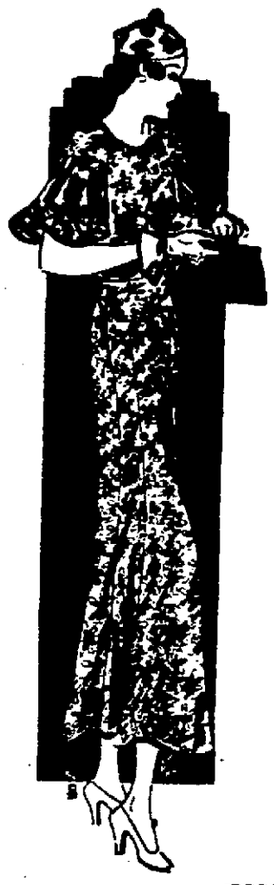

The last republican senator to attend a world conference representing this country was Reed of Pennsylvania. Reed's views on tariffs, however, another subject due for exhaustive discussion at London, work against him.

McNary, on the other hand, is a westerner and holds views on tariffs different from Reed's. The cooperation he has given the democrats as minority leader of the senate while the President endeavored to get his emergency program through congress also was pointed to by some as an important consideration in his favor.

Dr. Crispell Opens Office in Kingston

Dr. Raymond S. Crispell has announced the opening of an office in the General Sharpe Annex of the Governor Clinton Hotel in Kingston. Before coming to Kingston Dr. Crispell was connected with such hospitals as Bellevue in New York, Bloomingdale in White Plains and Johns Hopkins in Baltimore. Before severing his connections with the Sahler Sanitarium the first of the year, he served seven years as its medical director. At present he is on the staffs of the Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals.

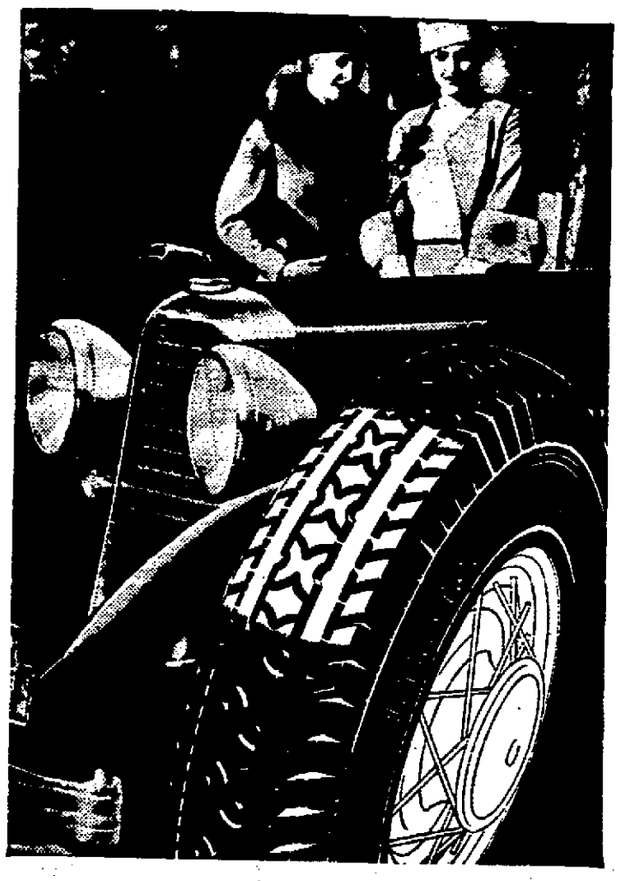

In keeping his connections in Kingston Dr. Crispell is following a tradition, in fact he is the fifth member of his family in the profession of medicine in Ulster county, where there has been a Dr. Crispell in practice for over a hundred years.

Committed to Jail.

Carl Kattenbach, 59, of New Paltz, a native of Germany, was committed to the Ulster county jail Thursday by Justice I. C. Barnes to serve five days on a charge of assault in the third degree.

What! Me pay more money for other tires?

Don't make me laugh!

I USED to judge a tire by what it cost. What a mistake that was. Last year I discovered that Riverside tires are made of the finest materials by skilled workmen—in one of America's largest tire factories. THE factory that makes millions of tires for America's leading cars. The only important difference between Riversides and other famous tires is price. Ward's prices are 10% lower. What's more, Riversides are guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction.

When I heard that, I put them on my Lincoln and I've been using them ever since. That saving of 10% will buy a lot of things I need. No tire salesman will ever get me to pay extra for other tires again. I'm married to Riversides.

WARD'S RIVERSIDE

TIRES

Ward's Unlimited GUARANTEE

Riversides are guaranteed to give satisfactory service regardless of time used or mileage run.

Any tire that fails to give satisfactory service will be repaired free of charge or replaced with a new tire, in which event you will be charged only for the actual service the tire delivered. Any necessary adjustments will be made at any of Ward's 500 Retail Stores.

HOW

HEALTH PAYS DIVIDENDS: EASES STRAIN ON MIND.—What are the dividends of health? In the first place the healthy man possesses the following characteristics which gain for him peace of mind:

1. He is strikingly unconscious of his body, which runs on well without special attention.
2. He is free from disturbing varieties of self consciousness.
3. He is easily absorbed in outside interests.
4. He meets an outrage, an insult or misfortunes in a matter-of-fact manner and never sulks or broods.
5. He manifests a general joy in living.
6. He carries a burden of heavy work and responsibilities without complaint and with little fatigue.
7. He develops a set of habits and adheres to them tenaciously.
8. He seldom craves narcotics.
9. He seldom craves any of the "psychic escapes" such as dream life, self-deception, cheap fiction and religious consolations.

"Thus everything from a man's ability to digest raw onions up to his ability to accept disagreeable facts and to get along with disagreeable persons depends largely on the precise kind of health he has," maintains Walter B. Pitkin, professor of journalism, Columbia university, in "Dividends of Health," an article published in Hygeia Health Magazine.

How Chicks Live Inside Egg Shell and Peck Out

How does the unhatched chick breathe inside its shell, if it does breathe? How does a chick know when to hatch? How does it crack its shell?

These are some of the questions a good many people would probably not be able to answer.

Plainly, the shell of the egg looks much too hard and brittle for an unhatched, frail little creature to crack without much difficulty. But nature has equipped the chicken with a special little "egg-tooth" for this particular purpose. The egg tooth grows on the upper beak of the chicken, which uses it as a little chisel with which to break out of its shell when its strengthening muscle makes it stretch its neck. The egg-tooth disappears a day or two after the chick has hatched.

If you should paint an egg in which there was a baby chick, the little thing would die of suffocation. For the baby chicks breathe inside their shells before they hatch as well as afterwards. The air comes right through their shells, which are full of very tiny holes, though we can't see them. In the thin skin just under the shell are many tiny blood vessels. These carry the air to all parts of the developing chick and carry away the carbon dioxide which the unhatched chicken, like all animals, gives off.

The chick, which begins as only a speck in the yellow part of the egg, requires water, too, as it grows, and there is plenty of water in the egg; and sometimes the newly hatched chicks live for several days without water because of the supply they had in their shells.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

How Blotters Came About

The discovery of blotting paper was due to an accident in an English paper factory. A careless workman forgot to put the sizing into a certain lot of paper and the result was thought to be an entire waste. The proprietor of the mill was very angry and sat down to write a note of protest to the negligent workman. He thought that a piece of the ruined paper would be good enough for this purpose and was further annoyed to find that his ink spread and was absorbed by the paper. Then the idea occurred to him that the paper might be used instead of sand for drying wet ink. Experiments proved him right, and the lot of "ruined" paper was advertised under the name of "blotting paper."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

How Population Is Divided

The 1930 estimate of the International Statistical Institute of the League of Nations estimates that there are more than 2,000,000 people in the world, divided by continents as follows: North and South America, 240,000,000; Europe, 350,000,000; Australia, 7,000,000; Asia, 960,000,000; Africa, 150,000,000. It may be assumed that half this number, or 1,000,000,000 are females. It is estimated that the globe's net gain in population is 30,000,000 a year.—Pathfinder Magazine.

How Many Miles Japan Owns

Japan's mandates in the Pacific, including the former German colonial possessions, extend for 1,200 miles north from the Equator and for 2,500 miles from east to west. The total area of land in this enormous expanse of sea is only 830 square miles. The islands number 625, and the groups are the Marianne islands, excluding Guam, which belongs to the United States; the Marshall islands and the Caroline islands.

How Tube Traffic Is Handled

The Holland tunnel, which connects Jersey City and New York city, is composed of twin tubes. It is 9,250 feet in length. Each tube is of 29 feet 6 inches external diameter, with interior roadway width of 20 feet and clearance height of 13 feet 6 inches. Each tube has traffic in one direction only.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee—Donald Stroh likes fish but he doesn't wait them to come out of the faucet with his glass of water.

When he found his meter clogged with fish, he joined with Joseph Schwada, city engineer, in urging that a filtration plant be installed at the city water works.

A Good Sign.

Chicago—It's getting more difficult right along to find men to serve on juries, Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of Chicago's municipal court says, and he interprets this to be a sign that employment is on a definite increase.

Modern Hazards.

Chicago—Chief Solomon Afraid-of-Eagle, 75 year old Sioux sachem strayed off the temporary reservation at a century of progress and got mixed up in Chicago's traffic. The result: He was struck and injured by an automobile driven by a suburbanite. His good friend, John Strike-a-Stone said he called up Rosebud, N. D., and notified the chief's daughter, Anna Laughing-in-the-Moonlight.

A Tough Break.

Green Bay, Wis.—A lineman for the Public Service Corporation of Wisconsin was disgusted. His reason:

After spending half an hour rescuing a cat stranded atop a light pole a dog chased it up another pole as soon as he had deposited it on the ground.

Accommodates

Rapid City, S. C.—So many persons ran into Charley Bradsky's oil station during a hail storm for shelter that he moved his car outside to accommodate them.

After which he noticed that the top of it was riddled by the hail.

Kind and Sensible Mailman

Madison, Conn.—The rural mail carrier on Route 1 is puzzled over those two boxes at Southwest Crossing. Bees have settled in one, and a wren has built a nest in the other. He will disturb neither.

Boning Up

New York—The tropical man at the Aquarium is studying Euclid.

The reason is a shipment of strange fish from the Tigris and Euphrates river. One is a fish with black stripes running vertically around his body and horizontally along his tail.

"He has no name," the fish man sighed," and I must find one. Obviously, in view of the lines, he requires a geometric name, so I'm boning up on Euclid."

Boy Forgets Clothes

Dodge City, Kas.—A small boy, probably somewhat absent-minded, threw a scare into attendants at the municipal swimming pool.

At closing time a little shirt and a pair of overalls with a nickel in the pocket were found in the dressing room and no little boy could be found to claim them. The pool was drained. No body was found.

Attendants are holding the clothing and the nickel until the young owner remembers where he left them.

Degree For Deaf Mute

Cincinnati, O.—A youth who never heard a lecture nor took part in a class discussion will be awarded a certificate in architecture by the University of Cincinnati.

Hilbert G. Duning, 23, a deaf mute since birth, won the certificate in three years of evening study.

No Case

Johnstown, Pa. — Claiming he stole $7,000 of her late husband's insurance money, Mrs. Helen Baker asked to have Michael Soraka arrested.

Police found him in Gary, Ind., and brought him back, but now they say charges probably will be dropped.

Soraka and Mrs. Baker got married.

Yes, Yes; by Degrees

Morgan Co. Controls United Corporation

Washington, May 26 (AP).—Through George Howard, president of the United Corporation—utilities stock holding concern—the Senate committee investigating J. P. Morgan and Company ascertained today that the opulent banking firm had turned over stocks in several utilities to the United in 1925 at $12,000,000 less than market value in a deal which gave it control of Howard's organization.

Submitting readily to questions by Ferdinand Pecora, the committee counsel, Howard painstakingly told how three days after the United Corporation was formed, it obtained from Morgan much stock in Mohawk, Hudson Power; the United Gas Improvement Company and Public Service of New Jersey.

In turn, the United Corporation was authorized to issue a total capital stock of 13,000,000 shares consisting of 1,000,000 first preferred, 2,000,000 preference shares and 10,000,000 common.

U. S. Grant Product of Methodist Environment

Ulysses S. Grant was a product of a Methodist environment. His father was of Puritan descent, a book lover and a skilled debater; it was said of him that he carried the Bible in his heart. His mother also was a keen student of the Scriptures, a woman of sincere piety and of saintly temperament. Both parents were active in the church. The teaching of the boy's home became the practice of his life. Men who were with him at West Point later testified to the purity of his speech and the rectitude of his conduct. In the army "he gave every encouragement and facility for securing a prompt and uniform observance of religious services, and was generally found in the audience listening to the preaching." He had the chaplain say grace at mess.

As President, Grant and his family attended the old Foundry Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. J. P. Naman was their pastor. He subsequently became a bishop, and Grant served as a trustee of his church, the Metropolitan temple, New York.

Original "Uncle Tom"

It is commonly believed that the prototype of Uncle Tom, in Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was Rev. Josiah Henson, who is buried near Dresden, Ont. According to the inscription on the tombstone, Henson was born on July 15, 1789, and died on May 3, 1883, at the age of ninety-three. His birthplace was Fort Tobacco, Md., and he escaped from slavery in 1828, reaching Canada and becoming a Methodist minister and one of the leaders in the "underground railroad" for fugitive slaves. According to the generally accepted account, Mrs. Stowe met Henson in Boston in 1850 and made use of his own story to write her famous novel. The assertion of western Ontario residents that Henson was the hero of this book was recently confirmed by the novelist's grandson, Lyman Beecher Stowe, in a speech at Montreal. Mr. Henson visited England several times and was entertained by Queen Victoria.

World's Finest Horses

Arabian horses are bred by the Bedouin tribes in the deserts of Arabia, and are crossed on the so-called cold-blooded horse of the North, and their blood has been the foundation of practically all breeds of horses in Europe and America. The number of pure-Bred Arabians is now and has been at all times small, even in Arabia, due to the desire of most breeders to outcross in order to attain some special quality, such as size, speed, action, jumping or weight hauling ability, all of which Arabian blood possesses to a considerable degree.

KASHMIR VALE FULL OF CHARM

Srinagar Is a Lovely Place for a Vacation.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

AS WARM weather approaches, the Vale of Kashmir, one of the famous garden spots of the world, beckons to the vacationists of India. Its wooded hillsides don a new green which is reflected in the clear, blue, placid streams of the valley; and houseboats are put in order for a busy season.

The Vale of Kashmir lies among the lower Himalayas, north of the Indian Punjab. One reaches Srinagar, the summer capital of the native state known as the domain of the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir, over a long route by rail and motor. From Bombay one travels northward by train, via Delhi and Lahore, to Rawalpindi, one of the chief army posts of British India. There the way to beauty opens.

Almost at once on leaving Rawalpindi the motor road beings to climb. Up and up through the deodar-clad slopes of the lower mountain the road twists and turns, the heated air of the plains grows cool and invigorating, until, when travelers make their first overnight stop at Tret, they feel captivated by a joyous holiday spirit.

Everything seems amusing and interesting. Ruffled punkas swing from the ceiling, though you may have no need of them. Your deft and turbaned servants patter barefooted about the rooms, unrolling your bedding on the stringed charpoys, the fairly comfortable beds of India. Even the not-too-bad food served by the bungalow cook is a matter for hungry jest. Lovely, lovely world, with a summer of Kashmir ahead.

Native Chauffeurs Are Speedy.

The road from Rawalpindi to Srinagar is a well-built motor road, some 200 miles long, and it lies through the mountains north of the Pir Panjal pass. Snowy peaks rise high above you. The rushing waters of icy streams chatter noisily below. Hairpin turns in the road make you catch your breath and curl your toes, for the ways of the native driver are his own and without fear, and, alas, you have not the knowledge of his language wherewith to express your feelings.

Soon, from the first traveling sahib, you may learn to say, "Ahista, ahista!" But you never succeed in making an Indian chauffeur drive slowly, slowly.

It is possible to make the trip to Srinagar in a day, but not ahista! Quite the contrary. You spend two night in dak bungalows (resthouses) along the way, the second at Baramula, which lies at the edge of the great depression known as the Vale of Kashmir.

From Baramula one can go the rest of the way by boat, up the Jhelum river; but you may prefer to drive. The last 35 miles lie across a level stretch, the road bordered on either side by slender poplars.

The people passed along the way are quite different from those one sees in India. Ekkas and tongas, the two-wheeled horse-drawn vehicles of the country, draw aside to let you pass.

The Vale of Kashmir is a level valley about 80 miles long and averaging about 20 miles in width. It lies, a great oval, surrounded by mountains green with deodar and spruce on the lower reaches and white with snow until well into the early summer. Skies of an incredible blue complete a color scheme of fairy loveliness. Throughout the valley winds the curving line of the River Jhelum, along the banks of which straggle the streets and bazaars which form the ancient city of Srinagar.

Quaint Scenes in Srinagar.

Seven curious bridges span the river, and along the shore quaint old wooden houses lean sometimes at a rakish angle. Many of the city streets end in wide stone steps leading down to the river's edge. These stairways are usually animated scenes of native life. Here the laundry men wash the clothes; here the women come to fill their water jars. Children tumble and play about, and goats and cows ramble freely among them all. From the overhanging balconies lengths of dyed pashmina hang out to dry. All is colorful and gay.

Also there is the interesting river life. A large part of the population of Srinagar lives afloat. Odd, long, pointed boats, called dungas, with superstructures hung with mats of woven reeds, are the only homes which thousands of Kashmiris ever know. Sleeping quarters within, a kitchen of pots open to the eyes of all, a few pots of brass or copper, and a poor Kashmiri's household is complete.

The native of more ample means has a better boat. Walls of wood replace the woven mass, and as better and better financial status is indicated, so the boats improve. The best are comfortable and well-furnished house boats, such as one might see upon the River Thames.

The English have made their contribution in the development of the house boat in Srinagar; for the Vale of Kashmir has become not only a favorite vacation land for the English army in India, but the permanent home of many retired officers and their families.

Servants All Are Men.

One lives easily in Kashmir. A host of servants cost about as much as one good cook in the West, and they feed themselves. Each one has his appointed duties and does them fairly well.

All your servants in Kashmir are men. The women seldom work out. Even the little children of Westerners frequently have men servants to care for them. Your list may include a mangi, or head boatman; a khitmagar (chief house servant), assistant khitmagar, a bhisti (water carrier, sweeper—of lowest caste and doer of menial jobs), a khansaman (cook), a dhobi (washerman), a dhurzi (sewing man), a mali (gardener), and three little chokeras, the small boys who paddle the shikara, a small gondola-like boat in which you go everywhere you desire. It seems an ample list!

If you take guests for tea to Shalimar gardens, the houseman goes along and serves a perfect meal under the spreading chenar trees. When you plan a morning in the bazaars, the houseman follows respectfully behind, your guide. Your days are carpeted with ease and your home is a joy, thanks to the willing service of an able houseman.

Where but in Kashmir could one call back to a houseman as one is leaving home for all day, "we will have guests for dinner tonight at nine o'clock," and return to find everything in perfect order, fresh flowers everywhere, the table set in holiday attire, and a course dinner perfectly planned?

Many of the Kashmiris are fine looking, the women especially having beautiful eyes and quite regular features. Like other native states of the Indian empire, Kashmir has an English resident, or advisory official, and through him more sanitary ways of living are gradually being introduced into the country. There is an excellent mission hospital and a zenana hospital, as the name implies, for women, and a school conducted by an English clergyman is doing wonders among the youth of the country.

Foreigners Like Kashmir.

The foreign element in Srinagar increases yearly. From the terrible heat of the Punjab come English army people, seeking the cool air and health of the hills, and these bring with them the influence of English manners and customs, and, better still, of English fair play. There is not in all Srinagar a merchant who does not rely whole-heartedly on the honor of the English Sahib.

Men Needleworkers of Kashmir.

Shopping is a quaint pastime in this City of the Sun. As one strolls along the Bund, eager merchants press their wares. Mohamad Jhan assures you that not in all Srinagar—no, not even at Ali Jhan's, his rival—can you procure such embroideries, such fine pashmina, such beautiful designs. Will not the Lady Sahib but see?

Or, as the small shikara of a merchant is rowed alongside your boat, deftly timed to find you at home, he eagerly spreads his wares. He is insistent that you see his treasures. "Only looking, Lady Sahib. Not buying, only looking." The foxy merchant well knows his goods are tempting. He is sure that some time you will buy.

The native industries of Kashmir, alas, have cheapened and some have almost died out entirely. No longer, for instance, can one procure the very finest shawls, such as made the name of Kashmir famed throughout the world. One can get good shawls, soft and fine, but the exquisite, old-time shawls are hardly to be found outside of museums.

Pashmina is one of the loveliest products of the land. It is a soft cream-colored woolen cloth, made from the fine under-hair of the Tibetan goat. The finer weaves are incredibly soft and the shawlmaker, hopeful for your order, will show you how a length of it can be drawn through a finger ring.

A much heavier woolen cloth, something akin to Scottish homespun, is called puttoo, and the better weaves make splendid outing clothes.

Queen and Parliament in Ancient St. Kilda's

Two strange things about St. Kilda, which has been abandoned by its inhabitants, were that it had a queen and a parliament of its own. The first "queen of St. Kilda" was a woman from the mainland who went there as a domestic servant to the minister many years ago. She was the only person on the island, except the minister, who could speak English, and being a well-educated and intelligent woman, the St. Kildans thought a great deal of her. Partly in jest they gave her a royal title; and when she died tragically in a boating accident, the title passed to her daughter, and then to the prettiest girl or woman on the island. The parliament, as it was called, met every day in the open air to decide the work that was to be done, whether fowling or work on the land. Sometimes disputes were settled by drawing lots, but the business of the "house" was conducted in a friendly spirit.

4-H Garden Camp Opening Today

More than 45 4-H Club members who are taking the garden project will gather this afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. Camp. A. J. Pratt, garden specialist of Cornell University will be the principal instructor. Besides the instruction in gardening the boys will enjoy the usual camp activities including swimming, games, boating, camp fires and camp cooking.

All those who have secured the consent of their parents will be tuberculin tested when they arrive at camp by Dr. George Weber of the County Tuberculosis Hospital and Miss Katherine Murphy, county tuberculosis nurse. One of the 4-"H's" stands for health and the 4-H Clubs are cooperating with the medical society and the education interests in forwarding this worthwhile activity.

Dr. Raymond Crispell will examine those who attend camp so as to determine the 1933 county health champions. Dr. Crispell has been the leader in the county for the past two years in this work. Each year Ulster county has had a State 4-H Health Champion and it hopes to repeat this year.

The first meal is dinner Friday evening. This is followed by organization into tribes and the election of chiefs. The evening program includes both outdoor and indoor games, instruction by Mr. Pratt in planning a garden and a camp fire program.

After breakfast, Saturday morning, Mr. Pratt will have two periods for instruction. His topics will be "Varieties and Seeds," and "Selecting and Preparing Vegetables for Exhibition." Barnard Joy, Ulster county 4-H Club agent and camp director, will have one period in which he will explain and introduce the new 4-H fruit project.

At 10:45 instruction in swimming and a dip in the Esopus Creek will take the place of the gardening work. Harvey J. Sarles, Red Cross Life Saver, will have charge of the swimming. Following lunch and a rest period there will be another period of swimming.

Instruction in gardening will be resumed at 2:15. The subects for the three 45 minute periods will be "Fertilizers; How to Get by with a Small Cash Outlay," "Planting Technique, Cultivation and Weed Control," and "Vegetable Judging."

A picnic supper will be followed by some free time in which the various groups may prepare stunts for the evening camp fire program.

The Sunday morning program includes a Sunday school service and free time for rest, reading or boating. Sunday dinner is the last meal.

Typical 4-H pep including singing, yelling and stunts will make all the events of camp enjoyable and interesting.

Besides those already mentioned the camp staff will include Mrs. Barnard Joy, dietitian, Miss Margaret Gippert, secretary and a number of adult leaders who will be in charge of the cabins. Besides six cabins that are used for sleeping, there is a large building that is used as a dining hall, rooms for instruction and recreation hall. The swimming facilities include a bath house, pier, fire boats and both shallow and deep water.

On the following week-ends other 4-H camps will be held, June 2, 3, and 4 is the week-end for Dairy and Poultry members. Older 4-H girls will come to camp June 9, 10, and 11 and younger girls will have their outing June 16, 17, and 18.

TREAT PARKING PLOT TO A COAT OF OIL.

The parking grounds adjacent to the court house and used by county officials for the parking of their cars, has been treated to an application of oil to lay the dust.

Numerous complaints are made by people parking their cars in the public parking grounds on John street over the rough condition of that parking ground. The parking space is filled with numerous holes and is unusually rough this spring.

Sing Sing prison was first known as Mount Pleasant prison, and was bought in 1825 to take the place of the old prison in New York city. About the middle of the last century the name was changed from Mount Pleasant to Sing Sing prison. The old institution was built on low land close to the river. Financial and Commercial

New York, May 26 (AP)—Bulls kept the stock market on the upward path today by bidding up a wide assortment of specialty issues.

The market was somewhat mixed, and milled around rather uncertainly in the middle of the day, but several issues were up 1 to 3 points or more, including "wet" issues and foods. Commodities were mixed. Wheat lost nearly a cent a bushel. Cotton rose nearly $1 a bale, then lost much of its advance.

Alcohol stocks continued to receive much bullish attention. U. S. Industrial Alcohol rose about 6 points, and American Commercial and National Distillers, 2 and 3. Gold mining stocks were again strong, with Homestake having one of its 10-point upsurges. Along with the wet issues, Coca Cola, which usually moves contrary to them, advanced 4, but then lost part of its gain.

The weekly mercantile review of Dun & Bradstreet was particularly optimistic, and may have prompted some of the bullish speculation in shares of companies producing consumers' goods. "In no week during the last three years," it said, "have the reports covering most lines of productive and distributive activity contained so many evidences of consistent improvement."

Corporate news included Sears Roebuck's sales report for the four weeks ended May 21, at $21,050,502, or somewhat under the $23,333,220 in the like period of last year. Among companies ordering regular dividends were General Electric, Chespeake and Ohio and Gillette.

Feeling of Unrest in Bird Song, Writer Says

Each individual bird song, rightly heard, with an effort to hold it single for what it is, will create a feeling of unrest in a human listener, says Chas. E. Trucewell, in the Washington Star.

This may arise because a bird is a piece of nature untrammeled by mind. It makes no attempt to correct what it is into something it would like itself to be. It is nature, and nature has a flaw in it, somewhere. This sad truth is at the base of all religions, and systems of ethics. It is the apple in the Garden of Eden. Man knows it, but man covers it up. The bird knows it, but the bird does not conceal it.

He opens his bill and he sings; and when he sings he does so in a distinctly minor key, to tell the whole world truly what the whole world knows. Surely this does not make the birds' songs any the less enjoyable, or any the less beautiful. The sorry belief that happiness is dependent upon laughter is merely a modern manifestation; it has arisen, it is having its day, and it will die out, because it is false. The true, as told to us in the songs of the birds, will sound forever.

"E Pluribus Unum," the Official Motto of U. S.

The Latin motto "E Pluribus Unum"—one from many—the official motto of the United States, and by act of congress is also inscribed on the coins, was originally proposed on August 1, 1776, by a committee of three which had been appointed by the Continental congress to prepare a device for a state seal. The committee consisted, incidentally, of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson.

Their suggested seal was not accepted, however, and it was not until June 20, 1782, that the motto was adopted as part of the second and successful device, which was submitted by Charles Thomson, secretary of congress.

It was in 1796 that congress directed the employment of "E Pluribus Unum" on the coinage. On the great seal it is inscribed upon a scroll issuing from an eagle's mouth.

The motto itself is an ancient turn of phrase, to be found in a number of classical authors. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Standard English Words

Standard English words are those incorporated in the language by authority, custom or general consent, says Pathfinder Magazine. All good unabridged dictionaries have marks to distinguish foreign and obsolete words, while slang terms, colloquialisms and words having a purely technical meaning are also so designated. All other words listed may be accepted as standard English words or their variants. Do and did, for instance, are variants of the same word—the verb to do. It is essential that an up-to-date dictionary be used, since the language is constantly changing. Camouflage, for instance, is now standard English, although it was not prior to World war.

Walking Sponges

Sponges, those simple collections of cells said to be the second lowest form of animal life, have always been known to fasten themselves permanently to some spot on the ocean bottom and never leave it until they die; food being obtained from the continual currents of water drawn through their tube-like passages. A species of sponge, hitherto unknown to science, discovered in the London aquarium, is reported to be capable of slowly creeping from a foodless area to one in which food is obtainable. It is supposed that one or more of these sponges entered the tanks unnoticed with sea water, and has multiplied.

Being a Good Citizen

Opinions probably differ as to just what qualifications a good citizen should have. He should be familiar with local issues and local affairs, not only from a study of events as reported from the newspapers, but he should read current magazines and familiarize himself with the operation of the local and national government, and he should follow the development of legislation in the national congress. He should be familiar with the records of the persons for whom he votes. He should conduct his own affairs with honesty and decency and should expect the local government affairs to be conducted in the same fashion.

Strange Westminster Scene

It is not generally known that there was an English parliament which was opened by an "infant in arms." It was Henry VI's first parliament, notes the Montreal Herald. The infant monarch was led through the crowded streets of London from the Tower to Westminster on the back of a tall horse. After the royal infant had been regaled on a diet of bread and milk he was carried into the House of Lords. Seated on his mother's knee, he took a dignified part in the proceedings. As an old chronicler says: "It was a strange sight, and the first time it was ever so seen in England."

More Cows Than People

New Zealand has more cows than people, according to a live stock census. At the time of the compilation there were 1,702,000 dairy cows and only 1,500,000 residents. In a year the number of bossies increased by 100,000. Only one of every five pounds of butter produced is eaten in the country.

Battle of Rhode Island

The battle of Rhode Island took place on August 29, 1778. The numbers were equal; each side had about 5,000 men. The British loss exceeded 1,000 killed, wounded and taken prisoners. There was an American suspicion that the British loss was much greater.

Appellate Division Reverses Bliss

At the October term of Supreme court, Judge Bliss presiding, a verdict of $500 for plaintiff was awarded by a jury in the case of Theresa Leader against Morris Kaplan. The action was brought on the theory of negligence, by Mrs. Leader who was injured while a customer at the Kaplan store on North Front street. Judge Bernard Culloton appeared for the plaintiff and A. J. Cook for the defendant at the trial.

After plaintiff had offered testimony and at the conclusion of the plaintiff's case A. J. Cook, counsel for defendant, claimed that the question of negligence on the part of the defendant had not been established except by photographs which had been placed in evidence and that the plaintiff had not shown any negligence on the part of the defendant. On that theory no evidence was offered on the part of the part of the defendant Kaplan and the jury awarded $500 to plaintiff when Judge Bliss submitted the case to the jury after denying the motion of Mr. Cook to dismiss the complaint.

An appeal was taken by Mr. Cook and the Appellate division has just handed down a decision in the matter which sustains Mr. Cook's contention. The memorandum of the Appellate Division says, "Judgment and order reversed, on the law, with costs and complaint dismissed with costs, on the grounds that no action of negligence is established, without prejudice, however, to the right of the plaintiff to institute a new action if so advised."

Judge Bliss before whom the action was tried last October, now sitting on the Appellate Division, was disqualified thereby from participating in the present decision.

Plaintiff alleged that she fell while a customer in the store when she attempted to pass from one portion of the store into another and fell down a couple of steps leading to a lower level from a hallway.

Dairymen Blank Herzogs; Davis Yields But 3 Hits

Clow's Dairymen scored their second shutout of the season at the Athletic Field Thursday evening when they whitewashed Herzog's Hardwaremen by the score of 5 to 0. Van Etten & Hogan's Truckers were the other victims to be blanked by the Dairymen, who still have a chance of finishing near the top of the City League circuit. It was the fourth straight defeat for the Hardwaremen.

"Pucker" Davis pitched three-hit ball for the Dairymen and it was largely through his efforts that they won. Besides elbowing effectively he handled six chances without a miscue. He also received good support from his teammates, who played errorless ball. Only 24 men faced Davis during the seven innings.

"Erv" Alward opposed Davis and was nicked for eight safeties. But he was not as fortunate as Davis on the defense, his teammates faltering six times. Each error counted in the run-scoring.

"Hank" Krum delivered the only extra base hit of the game, a triple to left field. But it took Adolph Stumpf to turn in the best batting record of the evening. He connected safely three times out of four trips to the plate.

The Hardwaremen erred as early as the first inning and the boot put the Dairymen in position to score their first run. Flemings uncorked a wild heave after stopping Kreppel's grounder and Kreppel reached second on the play. He stole third and dented the rubber on Stumpf's fly to Flanagan in center field.

The Dairymen shoved two more runners across the platter in the third inning. Stumpf scored on Carr's single after he singled to left field and advanced to second base on a wild pitch. Carr went to second on the play and registered on Roosa's single to left field.

Errors by Wood and Alward put Lenahan on second base in the fourth inning. He tallied later on Stumpf's single to center field. Krum's triple and an error by Flemings gave the Dairymen their fifth and final run of the game in the fifth inning.

The Hardwaremen's best chance of scoring came in the second inning when they advanced men as far as third and first. The only other inning they had a man on base was the fourth.

SIDELINERS

Umpire Joe Carr was back in harness, officiating behind the bat.

The game had to be stopped for a few minutes in the fifth inning on account of the sun. The rest seemed to do Krum a lot of good for he poled his triple as soon as play was resumed.

The five-gallon can of oil donated by Kendall Oil Co. is still waiting for someone to take it away. Maybe it will be taken tonight when the league leaders—Repealers and Gardeners—get together.

Repealers Meet Gardeners Tonight

A game, which no doubt will have a big bearing on the outcome of the first half of the City League, will take place at the Athletic Field this evening when the Morgan Repealers and Harry Sills's Gardeners cross bats. The Repealers are leading the rest of the clubs with five victories and no defeats, while the Gardeners are runners-up to the Repealers with three wins and one loss, suffered at the hands of the Repealers in the opening game of the season. Big Jim Voelker is slated to do the hurling for the Repealers with Ted Fraleigh held in reserve; Joie Hoffman will do the receiving. Paul Joyce will be on the mound for the Gardeners with Dick Dulin behind the bat. The game is scheduled for 6:20 sharp.

Tagging Major League Bases

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Brooklyn Dodgers, who looked for a while like one of the important teams of the National League, have undergone a thorough process of deflation since they began to tour the western half of the circuit.

After winning the first three games in the west, the Dodgers turned around and lost five out of six to Chicago and Pittsburgh and they ran into a 4-1 defeat in their first game at Cincinnati yesterday that dropped them into seventh place.

What's Wrong With Dodgers?

The Dodgers' hitters haven't been hitting; the outfield has been notoriously weak on defense; they had a bad spot in the infield, which seems to have been remedied by shoving Jimmy Jordan from Jersey City in at shortstop after both Glenn Wright and Jake Flowers failed to fill the bill; and their pitching went sour all at once.

Walter Beck, the big recruit, was the victim of yesterday's defeat. The Reds pounced upon him for five hits and three runs in the first three innings while Paul Derringer, who hadn't won a game for St. Louis or Cincinnati, held the Brooklyn batsmen in check with seven well spaced blows.

The victory sent Cincinnati into fourth place again as the Chicago Cubs knocked Boston's Braves loose from their first division berth with a 3-1 victory behind Pat Malone's two hit hurling and jumped up from seven to fifth, a half game behind the Reds. Malone set down 17 Braves in a row before Tom Zachary got the first single.

The first three clubs in the standing were idle as New York and Pittsburgh were rained out and St. Louis and Philadelphia had an open date.

Athletics Move Up.

The American League's feature game presented the familiar spectacle of Lefty Grove stepping in to save a game for the Athletics. He did it for the fifth consecutive game, pitching the last four innings as the A's beat the Detroit Tigers 4-3 in 12 frames and moved into a tie with the Chicago White Sox for third place. It was Grove's third victory in a week. The winning tally came on a homer by Pinky Higgins after Ed Coleman had tied the count with a circuit drive in the ninth.

Washington regained second place by pasting three St. Louis pitchers for 14 hits and a 7 to 2 victory while Al Crowder pitched six hit ball to win his seventh victory. Cleveland's four game losing streak ended in Boston when the Indians edged out a 3-2 victory in a mound duel between Mel Harder and Gordon Rhodes. A muffed fly by Dusty Cooke, Boston's newest outfielder, let the winning run score in the fifth.

The opener between the White Sox and the New York Yankees was halted by wet grounds.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

George Gibson, Pittsburgh's greying master mind, has himself a fine looking ball club these days, a consistent, cohesive team that is going to be hard to stop short of a pennant.

One look and I'm about ready to string along with the consensus which picked the Pirates to engage in what has come to be known as the "great fall classic." They still have the Cardinals to lick, but their superior balance should tell down the back stretch.

It's a baseball treat to watch Gibson's boys perform. They're not "cocky," but they give you the impression of a serene confidence in their ability. There isn't a trace of strain. They play with a grin, snapping up hard hit balls and flipping them around the infield with an ease and assurance that borders on carelessness. They're relaxed.

I watched them pin back Carl Hubbell's ears in their season's debut at the Polo Grounds. They worked the great southpaw over for eight hits, taking the kinks out of his renowned "screw" ball before it had a chance to break.

The score was close, 7 to 6, but for some reason or other you got the idea along about the second inning that the Pirates had it wrapped up. Every time the Giants pulled up close, the Traynors and Waners and Lindstroms just let out another notch and soon it wasn't close any more. They made it look easy.

They Won't Crack Again.

There no longer can be any doubt that in young Floyd Vaughan and Tony Piet the Pirates have one of the classiest keystone combinations extant. They are smooth, effortless afield and they're a headache to opposing pitchers who like to ease up on the bottom end of the batting order.

It was this pair that "cracked" late last summer and left the hole through which the Cubs slipped to the pennant. Unless the eyes deceive, it won't happen again. They look steady, sure of themselves.

Vaughan gobbled up an easy roller, set himself and lined a peg three feet, over Gus Suhr's head at first base. It let in a run and left a couple more on the sacks. Someone said Vaughan looked shaky.

The next batter slammed a vicious hopper just out of Traynor's reach at third. Vaughan raced over, lunged and speared it with his glove. Deliberately he straightened up, set himself and plunked a perfect strike into Suhr's glove to stop the rally cold. That was the pay-off on the 1933 Vaughan as far as I'm concerned.

Sitting In the Sun.

No matter how great or how smart a ball player old Honus Wagner was in his day, it is extremely doubtful he will be of any material assistance to Gibson in his role of coach. You can't stay away from any game very long and retain that fine edge.

Possibly, as a sentimental gesture, Hans is being planted on the third base coaching line at the start of the contests, but after an inning or two the former idol usually retires to the dugout or lounges along the nearby boxes and chins with admirers. He's still a great attraction.

Ulster County Gun Club Scores

Five members of the Ulster County Gun Club held a practice shoot at the Ulster County Gun Club traps Thursday evening. Kauder and Coles each broke a 25 straight.

Several members of the club expect to attend the registered shoot at Newburgh on Memorial Day.

The Ulster County Gun Club will hold two registered shoots this year, one July 16, the other August 20. A registered shoot is one authorized by the Amateur Trapshooting Association, the national organization. All scores made at a registered shoot are kept on record at the A. T. A. headquarters and from these scores the official record of each shooter is computed. A shooter has to shoot 1,000 registered targets during the year to be classified.

Thursday's scores:

Kauder	23+25=48
Coles	25+23=48
Chaffee, Sr.	23+20=43
Chaffee, Jr.	22+18=40
Dr. Bush	16+18=34

U. S. Seeks Zone Honors in Cup Play

Washington, May 26 (AP).—The United States Davis Cup team went out to clinch American zone honors today, needing only one more victory over Argentina's hard pressed players.

Clean-cut wins in the opening singles yesterday by Ellsworth Vines and Wilmer Allison, the American team captain, put this country's cup seekers in such a commanding position that there was little doubt as to the finish of the five-match series.

Today's play pitted Johnny Van Ryn and George Lott against Adriano Zappa, Argentina's quick-footed captain, and Adelmar Echeverria.

Even if the American doubles combinations conquer the Argentines today, however, Vines and Allison will play out the two final singles tomorrow, switching the opening day opponents.

GRAPHIC GOLF

KEEP CLUBHEAD AT RIGHT ANGLES TO LINE

CHICK EVANS pays particular attention to the position of the clubhead as it is taken back from the ball on the upswing. With his left hand moving the club back he keeps it in the same position it was in addressing the ball for a distance of three inches. Evans does this painstakingly; his purpose being to keep the clubface at right angles to the imaginary line to the hole for a distance of five or six inches; starting two or three inches back of the ball and continuing on for a few inches ahead of it. This insures him a true swing in a direct path for the pin.

DEBROSKEY RETURNS TO MAROON SQUAD

Friday afternoon Coach G. Warren Kias and Tony Debrosky, Maroon's ace right fielder and heavy slugger, held a conference in the gym which resulted in Debrosky again receiving his uniform to take up his regular position on the nine. Tony gave his final word yesterday after he had consulted Kias a few days before, who warned the player to weigh carefully in his mind his decision. Tony returned Friday to be reinstated.

Inquiries were made concerning Ed Messing, varsity catcher and Tom Lamb, second baseman, who left the squad after Debrosky had been suspended. Their desertions came on the day before the Middletown game which Kingston lost 6-5, and because of their lack of reason for leaving the squad it may result in their remaining idle for the remainder of the year.

FARM INCOME DROPS 57% IN THREE YEARS

Net Receipts Fell to $3,400,000,000 in 1932.

Washington.—The gross income of farmers declined $6,775,000,000, or 57 per cent, from 1929 through 1932 to $5,143,000,000 in the latter year, while their cash income, after deducting various production expenditures, declined about $3,400,000,000, or 72 per cent, the Department of Agriculture announced in its annual estimate.

The 1932 gross income of farmers compared with $6,911,000,000 for the preceding year, and was the lowest gross income in any year on the department's records, which go back to 1900.

Total production expenses, including wages to hired labor, interest and taxes payable, declined from $5,629,000,000 to $2,529,000,000 during the same period.

Are Hit Hardest.

The most drastic declines in expenditures, says the bureau, were for farm machinery, building materials and fertilizer.

The inventory value of farm property was put at $19,000,000,000 less at the end of 1932.

The department estimated that the amount available to the farmer for capital, labor and management purposes was $1,291,000,000 for 1932, compared with $5,574,000,000 in 1929.

The amount available for such purposes last year, the department said, "not only provided no return on investment, but also fell short by nearly $1,200,000,000 of rewarding the farm family for their labor, even at the reduced wage rates for hired labor."

"Practically all of the decline in agricultural income since 1929 has been due to declining prices for agricultural products," said the department. "The volume of agricultural production for market or for home use in 1932 was only about 5 per cent below that of 1929, while prices received by farmers for farm products averaged 59 per cent lower in 1932 than in 1929.

Live Stock Fares Better.

"The decline in gross income may be ascribed largely to national and world-wide changes in financial and economic conditions which have brought about lower price levels and curtailed demand for farm products in domestic and foreign markets."

Although the reduction in farm income from 1929 to 1932 was general for all farm products, producers of live stock and live stock products in general fared better than did the producers of crops, the department said. Since 1929 the gross income from crops declined about 61 per cent, whereas income from live stock and live stock products declined about 53 per cent. The decline in income from grains and cotton was especially marked, amounting to approximately 75 per cent for grains, and 69 per cent for cotton. The income from hogs in 1932 was only about one-third that in 1929.

World Going to Dogs, and Gold to the Fish

San Francisco.—Second Officer John Luprin, of the ferry Lake Tahoe, described a woman who dumped $2,000 worth of gold coins overboard because "it wasn't worth anything."

Luprin said that the woman stood by the rail until the boat was in the middle of San Francisco bay. She dropped a tin can, spilling a few $5 and $10 gold coins on deck. The boat officer said that he retrieved them for her, asking what she was going to do with them.

"I'm going to throw them in the bay," he said she told him. "The world is going to the dogs. Nobody has any use for money. I've thrown several cans in the bay already and I'm going to throw a lot more."

Wolf Pit Believed to Be Old Spanish Mine

Sylvarene, Miss.—An old mine, overlooked for years by state geologists as a wolf pit, has been discovered three miles from here by M. P. Finnegan, prospector. He believes Spaniards conducted mining operations here before they were driven out by the French.

The tunnel was found after digging through 20 feet of mixed dirt, which showed it had been thrown there by early miners. The tunnel is 6 feet deep, but its width and length have not yet been determined. Finnegan is working to determine how far into the hills it extends.

An Astonishing Adder

The South African puff adder is a viviparous reptile, but recently one confined in the Johannesburg zoo laid 22 eggs, much to the astonishment of its keepers and the zoo curator. In explaining this unusual happening the curator stated that it was a case of premature birth; that instead of the reptile retaining the eggs within its body until the young were born they were expelled for some unknown reason.

Hogs Heed Horn Until Tune Alters

Blackshear, Ga.—For the past three years James Middlebrooks, a Pierce county farmer, has been calling his hogs with the horn on his automobile. About every two weeks he would visit his different places and sound the horn of his car. Hogs would come running from every direction.

Recently he started out on his customary bi-monthly checkup, and, stopping at his first place, sounded his horn. It sounded loud and clear, but no hogs came from the woods. The farmer sounded his horn several times before he realized why the hog-calling method he had used successfully before was not producing results. He had traded automobiles the week before, and his new car had a different sounding horn.

Picture Forgotten 50 Years

After gathering dust in the cellar of the Leeds Art gallery of Leeds, England, for more than 50 years, a large picture was found during a renovation of the gallery. It shows the martyrdom of St. Sebastian and is believed to be the work of a Spanish master of the Seventeenth century. It was exhibited in Leeds in 1875 and afterward presented to the city.

Earthworms Don't Change

Every earthworm is both male and female. Their eggs are deposited in small cocoons secreted by the worm's body, and these eggs hatch into tiny earthworms. They will never become butterflies as do the caterpillars; they will always be just what they are—for an earthworm once is an earthworm always, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer.

Judge Clearwater Lauds Murder Trial

The sentence of Michael Connor by Judge Traver on Thursday, terminates one of the tragic chapters in the story of the death of Uriah Quick, so far as Ulster county immediately is concerned. There having come adverse comment upon the amount of time taken and the expense involved in this prosecution and trial, Judge Clearwater having been district attorney of Ulster county for nine years, ten years county judge, and judge of the supreme court, for twenty years a member of the New York State Probation Commission, for fifteen years the vice president of that commission having on a visit to Europe taken with him letters of introduction to some of the most eminent judges of England, France, Germany and Austria, and letters from the Attorney General of the United States to the Attorney Generals of those countries, and having been appointed by Elihu Root chairman of the committee upon the Prevention and Punishment of Crime of the Constitutional Convention of the State of New York in 1915, and contributed several papers to the publications of the American Bar and New York State Bar Associations upon the prevention and punishment of crime, The Freeman asked him if he would give to it his opinion regarding the matter.

"Well," said the judge, "I don't think I can do better than to call attention to the statement of Chief Justice John Marshall of the Supreme Court of the United States, in his discussion of the world-wide Dr. Webster murder case.

"The Chief Justice said:

"'Ordinarily the court ignores criticism of judicial action which usually comes from sources failing adequately to consider the gravity of the duty of the commonwealth in cases of homicide, particularly those in which the motive was greed or the desire unlawfully to obtain the property of the victim.

"'If, however, the time should come when the prosecuting officers or the judges of this land should be remiss in the investigation of crime of this magnitude and the punishment of offenders or be deterred from so doing because of the time, energy and expense involved, we will may consider that notwithstanding our boasted freedom and superiority as compared with foreign nations, we have begun that descent which always ends in barbaric terrorism.'

"It cannot justly be said," added Judge Clearwater, that the district attorney or the counsel for the defense in any way exceeded their duty. The attitude of Judge Traver under the most trying conditions was admirable to the most minute particular. The jury carefully was chosen; all were men of high character and the finest citizenship; the trial as an incident in the judicial history of the county always will rank high."

Infant Has Narrow Escape

Plattekill, May 26—The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Birdsall narrowly escaped death, Tuesday morning, after being placed in a carriage which was stationed in front of the Birdsall garage. Mr. Birdsall, attempting to remove the car from the garage, stalled the engine, and simultaneously heard a crash, which he discovered was the baby carriage, smashed beneath the wheels of the car. The fifteen months old infant escaped injury with the exception of slight abrasions on the side of its face. The carriage was completely wrecked, when it was found between the wheels of the car.

A nicotine sulphate spray will keep dogs and cats from running over flowers and shrubs because they dislike the odor.

One Night Instead

He had known Mary in his boyhood days, but had not seen her for a number of years.

One day they met at a dance.

"Hello, Mary," he said, "are you married yet?"

"Not yet," replied the girl.

"But I thought a charming girl like you would have been married long before now," he willingly returned.

"Of course, there's two waiting," said the girl a little sadly.

"Two?" he exclaimed. "But you're surely not going to marry two, are you?"

"No, no," she informed him. "The two that's waiting is the parson and me."—Answers Magazine.

Warm Reception Waiting

"So you were going to a fire," said the speed cop sarcastically to the motorist he had stopped.

"W-well, not exactly," said the motorist breathlessly, "but I'm trying to prevent one."

The speed cop nodded grimly.

"And how were you going to do that?" he asked.

"Well, the boss said that's what he'd do if I were late again, and I was hurrying to get to the office in time," explained the motorist.—Answers Magazine.

ABSOLUTELY

"I really couldn't resist Fred when he proposed. The dear fellow put his arm around me and—"

"I see, dear, you yielded to pressure."

Back Where He Started

Doctor—You ought to be getting well by now. Have you carried out all my instructions?

Patient—Most of them, but I can't take that two-mile walk every morning, as you ordered. I get too dizzy.

Doctor—What do you mean, dizzy?

Patient—Well, I guess I forgot to tell you. I'm a lighthouse keeper.—Women's World.

Fact Is Fact

Teacher—Do you think George Washington could have pitched a dollar across the Rappahannock river, as he is said to have done?

Bright Pupil—I dunno. It says in our history that Washington pitched his camp across the Delaware river when the British were pursuing him.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Social Progress

"Has your boy Josh made any distinguished acquaintances since he went to the city?"

"Well," replied Farmer Corntossel, "he knows all the big movie actors by name, though I don't know whether he's acquainted with any of them personally."

KEEP THE CHANGE

He—I have been a bachelor for years and now I long for a home.

She—Well, I hope you don't expect me to furnish one.

Publicity

"A statesman must rely a great deal on publicity," said the young man who is learning politics.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But it must be carefully managed. His success may depend largely on getting what he says into print and keeping what he thinks out."

Known All

"Say, Pop?"

"Yes, Son?"

"What do they mean by the 'Middle ages?'"

"The 'middle ages,' Son, are the ones where a woman stops counting when she has reached them."

Frank About It

The floor manager called his judges together and told them that a frank policy would be pursued about the baby show.

"Huh?"

"First prize will go to the prettiest mother."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Why She Remains

"And you have had the same servant for two years?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Crumlets. "She says she doesn't believe in changing after she has gone to the trouble of teaching a family her ways."

St. Mary's Minstrel Successfully Given

St. Mary's Boy Scout minstrel in the form of a Mardi Gras was successfully given at St. Mary's Hall, Broadway and McEntee street, Thursday night and will be repeated tonight at 8:15 when a capacity audience is expected to applaud again the efforts of the Scouts who have all kinds of variety to offer in their program.

Among those who attended last night's performance was the Rev. Joseph B. Scully, former pastor of St. Mary's Church, who had many compliments for the Scouts; the Rev. James P. Moore, and all who helped in staging the minstrel, especially Francis A. Boss, president of St. Mary's Holy Name Society, who had charge of decorating the hall, which is done along a most novel scheme, and arranged the beautiful stage setting.

Following the show tonight there will be dancing with music by Ted Riccobono's orchestra, which accompanies the minstrel.

Beginning of Century

The Nineteenth century began at midnight which marked the beginning of January 1, 1801, and ended at midnight which marked the end of December 31, 1900.

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank our relatives, friends and neighbors, the Get-Together Social Club, the Lomontville Home Bureau, the Athletic Society of St. Paul's Church, the Rev. Paul M. Young, Wolf Bros. Undertakers, for their kindness shown during the illness and death of my mother, Susan Rousch, also for the beautiful floral offerings sent to the home.

The Mirror of Nature

By COSMO HAMILTON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

THE instinct of self-preservation made the man draw back. The taxicab, unconscious of his escape, cut experimentally through the thick yellow fog. He laughed as he felt his way to the embankment above the sullen Thames. That movement into safety on the part of one who was on his way to commit suicide was comic in its irony, it seemed to him. He faced the city over whose hard pavements he had trod hungrily and shabbily in search of bread, and waved his hat. He put his hands on the stonework so that he might vault into peace and fetched them back with a jerk. One of them pressed against something that was warm and soft.

"What is it? What do you want?" There was fright in the woman's voice. "Go away. I want to be alone."

He could see the blurred outline of a well-dressed woman who was about to make a spring. "Oh, don't do that," he said.

There was no anger in the voice this time. Only weariness and appeal. "Oh, do go away. I'm not interfering with you."

"Well, as a matter of fact, you are. It's difficult to work oneself to the necessary pitch again and I've been looking over this place every night for weeks."

"Oh, then you. . . . That's funny," she said. "Odd that we should have chosen the same spot at the same moment, don't you think? I made up my mind to do this thing half an hour ago."

"But I haven't got your pluck."

"Pluck? I need more pluck to go on living than to end my life tonight."

"Oh, I see," he said. "But then I'm fond of life and if some beneficent person gave me a helping hand—"

The woman moved closer and peered into his face. "Come with me," she said, seized by a new idea. "We may be able to shed a little mutual philosophy on the question of Life and Death. I live quite close to this place."

And this they did, arm in arm. His hungry eyes had often rested on what had appeared to be an inhospitable door.

"Follow me," she said, and opened another door.

He drew up short with a cry. It was years since he had stood in a place so warm and companionable. "And you went down to the river," he said reproachfully.

"I'm thirty-six," she answered, "and I'm all alone in this place. I came from the country at twenty where all my blood had danced and my future was filled with romance and idealism. Every day since them I've worked in the British museum. I've kept myself from hunger by poring over old volumes for the benefit of other people. And when a week ago I came out of a monotonous coma to find that my business enabled me to take these rooms and that my income was large enough to permit me to employ an assistant so that I could find an hour or two a day during which I could stand in the sun—"

"You went into the nearest church and thanked God on your knees."

"That's where you're wrong," she said. "My sense of joy has been deadened by my work."

He watched her for several minutes with intense eagerness. Here was an unhappy woman, despoiled of joy by work, for whom he might be able to do something before he groped his way back to the bridge and wrote failure against his name.

He said, "I was born without ambition, unpractical from the start, and when the money which I had inherited was all spent and no one would give me a job I left the streets of the city with nothing but a song. I carried all my possessions on my back. I made hay for honest farmers. I walked the river tow-path and pulled people's boats along. So long as summer lasted I broke my bread to the orchestra of birds and was lulled to sleep under haystacks by the quiet song of the stars. The beauty of sky and trees, the intimate friendship of nature, the charity of men and women made rain less wet and hunger less intense. In winter I returned to the city, sold papers and slept in doorways—yours among others. Now this life has shown its effect on me—one of my lungs has gone. There is only suicide for I cannot wait for death. Nor do I care for a pauper's hospital and a nameless hole in the ground. I would gladly go on living, for the world is beautiful and one can always lend a hand."

He stopped and got up slowly.

"I go alone," he said, holding out his hand.

"Go into the country when the summer comes. The stars will send you messages and all young growing things will hold up the mirror of nature and you'll begin again. Thank you and good-bye." He smiled as he bid his new friend farewell.

"No," she said. "We will only say goodnight."

There was a tremble on his lips.

"I can afford an assistant," she said. "Take your place in my office. I engage you from tonight. It was God who placed your hand on mine out there in the dark. Help me to lift this fog."

He bowed but couldn't speak. And when he was alone he stood up with his eyes alight in the room of which he had dreamt. The unsatisfied river moved on to the sea.

"Mother" Crim

TO MRS. ELIZA CLINEDINST Crim, who died recently at the age of ninety-four years in New Market, Va., the title of "Mother" was a term of military tribute. It was a title of honor earned at the Battle of New Market in May of 1864, when Mrs. Crim "mothered" as she nursed scores of wounded and dying boys, members of that famous band of Virginia Military Institute cadets whose gallant charge is the high spot of this battle.

In the spring of '64 the superior numbers and greater resources of the North were beginning to tell against the South. Two years earlier "Stonewall" Jackson's campaign in the Shenandoah valley had successfully cut General McClellan off from auxiliary troops and thwarted his plans. Now, hoping for similar results, General Lee sent General Early up the valley. In spite of heavy odds, Early won several victories and even threatened Washington before General Sheridan defeated him at Winchester and forced his retreat to the South.

It was in one of these victories that the V. M. I. cadets played their brilliant part. The little company, ranging from fourteen to nineteen years in age, had been hurried up from Lexington by a forced march of three days to be on hand in case of emergency. They were a spirited band, afire with patriotism, eager for action. Although it had been planned to hold them in reserve, the outnumbering forces of the enemy and their own insistence won them a place in the very front line. There they held their position for several hours, under heavy artillery fire and infantry attack, and at the decisive moment made a spectacular charge to victory! Years later Mrs. Crim described that charge: "I saw the terrible shells explode right in front of the line of cadets as they charged down Shirley's hill. The deadly fire cut gaps in their line, but they closed up and without faltering they moved forward to victory and death."

The wounded were carried to the old Rice home in New Market, now the Virginia Knights of Pythias orphanage. There Mrs. Crim took charge, nursing, comforting, mothering. One of her strongest memories was of the devotion of the cadets for each other. She told how Moses Ezekiel, later the famous sculptor of V. M. I.'s memorial "Virginia Mourning her Dead," carried a wounded comrad into the house and held him dying in his arms. Mrs. Crim holds the only medal of valor ever awarded by the Virginia Military Institute.

When Lions and Tigers Fight

A lion is no braver or fiercer than a tiger, but in a group of animals, the tiger seldom has a chance in a fight which goes to a conclusion because the lions are gangsters. When a lion and a tiger engage in a fight, the other lions invariably go to the assistance of the lion, while the rest of the tigers refuse to become even interested in their fellow tiger's plight.

Overproduction of Oil

Two years after the first oil well in the United States came in, the industry was faced with overproduction. In 1859, the first oil produced sold for $20 a barrel. In 1861 the price was 10 cents a barrel. Output in the latter year was 5,000 barrels daily.

Triangle Show Was A Success

The variety show which the Kingston Triangle Club presented Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium proved to be just as successful as their first show given several weeks ago.

The O'Reilly Twins, who opened the program in a dancing and talking number, were very clever.

Jane Ball, Marion Tammany and Mildred Bilyou, pupils of Miss Helen Cashin, rendered several novelty dance numbers accompanied on the piano by Dan Bittner. Later on the program Jane Ball presented a soft shoe dance and also a toe dance.

The Technocratic Cow sponsored by Orson Beatty provided plenty of laughter.

Frank and Buddy Oulton in a skit "The Farmer Boy" proved quite popular.

Robert Hawksley, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Marie Gifford, charmed the audience with several vocal solos.

The Indian club swinging number presented by General Secretary Clarence S. Schoonmaker made a hit and when he used lighted clubs on the darkened stage brought back memories of the time when this number was always a popular number on the vaudeville stage.

Fred Van Deusen, local magician, presented a number of new magical illusions.

The show was brought to a close by the always popular Blue Ridge Rangers in song and music.

Clarence S. Schoonmaker acted as master of ceremonies and the lighting effects were provided by A. C. Hendrey. The entire proceeds of both shows will be turned over to the Y. M. C. A.

World Currency Stabilization
France's Main Conference Aim

French Spokesmen At London

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This article, describing the position of France at the world economic and monetary conference in London, is the second of six concerning the aims of the principal participating nations. It is written by M. K. Whiteleather of the staff of the Associated Press writers assigned to the conference.)

By M. K. WHITELEATHER.

Paris (AP).—Two main problems will occupy the French at the world economic conference which meets in London on June 12.

1—Stabilization of the dollar and sterling.

2—General use of gold as a monetary standard.

On these two questions the French delegation is expected to center its activities. On other subjects a more passive role appears likely.

Stabilization French Need.

France would gain by stabilization and by return of the gold standard, for wide fluctuations affect the franc when it fights for world markets in the same ring as the dollar and the pound.

Heretofore the franc was a bantamweight in the commercial prize ring, while the dollar and sterling were heavyweights.

But since the dollar, on April 19, followed sterling off gold the franc spurted to the front as a world medium of exchange. This sudden prestige, however, did not help French business, since American and British goods were better able to compete with French products in and outside France.

Would Lift Disadvantage.

This disadvantage the French would like to overcome by getting England and the United States back on gold.

On almost all other questions the French are expected to sit and listen while delegates from other countries talk, for official quarters foresee that on most of them much will be asked of France.

Experts have figured that three chief concessions will be suggested to the French:

1—A more liberal lending of money abroad.

2—Abolition of the quota system of regulating imports.

3—Lowering of tariff rates.

Caution will be observed on these subjects, government quarters say. The government has been seeking a freer hand in commercial matters so as to have stronger negotiating powers at London.

Reported chief among French aims at the approaching London economic conference is stabilization of the English pound and the American dollar. Georges Bonnet (left), French finance minister, is scheduled to succeed Premier Edouard Daladier (right) as head of the French delegation after the initial stages of the sessions.

In spite of this official reserve, a strong body of opinion is demanding that the delegation, headed in the initial stages by Edouard Daladier, premier, and later by Georges Bonnet, finance minister, join the representatives of other countries in an active attempt to pull down barriers to commerce.

Caillaux Attacks Production.

Joseph Caillaux, the eminent financier, has proposed, for example, that France lead the way in measures designed to limit production of basic commodities so as just to meet world consumption and prevent the collapse in prices that accompanies accumulation of stocks.

"Unless the world decides to do this," M. Caillaux said, "the conference will be condemned to sterility and we shall not get out of this crisis."

Exporters and importers, hit by a 60 per cent drop in foreign trade in recent years, also are demanding action. They have pointed out that income from American tourists alone fell from $200,000,000 in 1928 to $71,000,000 in 1931.

Government Deficit Problem.

The public cash box has reflected this slump in business. The budget deficit of 13,000,000,000 francs has kept successive cabinets busy since last autumn trying to make ends meet.

While the conference moves along the French will be seeking settlement of the war debts which they owe to the United States and to England. The subject has been omitted from the London program, but the French say it must be disposed of before the conference ends.

BENEDICTINE TICKET COMMITTEE APPEALS.

The ticket committee of the recent green and gold ball held by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Benedictine Hospital wish to make complete returns at their next meeting June 7, and would ask any patron who has not as yet made a return to kindly do so, as this meeting closes the Auxiliary until September.
